Snow Covers Most Of Nebraska

All Public Schools Are Closed Today

All public schools in Lincoln will be closed Wednesday, according to an announcement late Tuesday by Public Schools Superintendent John Prasch.

"This means the parochial schools will probably be closed, too," Prasch said, "since they normally close if the public schools decide to."

Glenn Turner, Lancaster County superintendent of schools, said he had no definite information, but said "as it looks now, I don't think many, if any, of the schools in the county will be open."

Turner also indicated county school buses would not be running if the snow continued to fall heavily.

University of Nebraska and Nebraska Wesleyan University officials said both institutions would conduct final exams as scheduled.

Both schools are in the middle of exam week.

Officials from both schools advised students who "absolutely could not take their finals" to make arrangements with their teachers for make-up exams.

Eastern Storm Is Fatal To 20

By The Associated Press

Millions of East Coast residents shivered and shoveled in the aftermath Tuesday of a snow and ice storm that left at least 20 dead and knocked out power to hundreds of thousands of homes.

A Stamford, Conn., a man said his electricity went out at 7:40 a.m. on Monday and by Tuesday morning there was still no firm word on when it would be restored. He said he and his family spent most of the time "huddling under blankets." Dinner was cold cuts, milk and cheese. So was breakfast.

For some, the storm meant switching from the family car. "This is the first time I've been on a bus in two years," said Carolyn Lorente, 35, of Washington, D.C., where there was more than 10 inches of snow. "Usually I'd drive to ... do my shopping, but I don't have any snow tires."

For others, the bad weather meant bad business.

"It was just one of those forget-it days," said a spokesman for Hutzlers department store in Baltimore.

Snow turned to ice, making driving even more hazardous and hampering clean-up operations. Commuters found getting to work a continued struggle. The ice knocked down trees and power lines and froze switches on transit lines.

Connecticut Light & Power Co. said 160,000 customers were blacked out Monday and almost half of them remained cold and dark at midmorning Tuesday. United Illuminating said about 2,500 customers had nohpower Tuesday morning.

There were four storm-related deaths Monday and Tuesday in Connecticut, five in New York State, four in Massachusetts, two in New Hampshire, one in Virginia, one in Pennslyvania, one in Maryland and two on New England highways.

Reminder of a murder

This ramshackle store at almost-extinct Rock Bluff is a reminder of an unsolved murder which adds a grotesque note to misfortunes which have befallen the town since an Indian chief laid a perpetual curse upon it.

Volunteer Fire Official Blasts Pluta

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

An attorney for the Nebraska State Volunteer Firemen's Association Tuesday charged that State Fire Marshal Joe Pluta has given in to political pressure and compromised the safety of Nebraskans by replacing the National Life Safety Code with his won watered-down version.

Chadron attorney Charles F. Fisher told The Star, "We feel the present Fire Marshal is not doing his job properly."

For this reason, Fisher, on behalf of the association, Tuesday filed an initiative petition to take the Fire Marshal's job "out of politics" and substitute a selection procedure similar to that used for naming district and Supreme Court judges.

The selection process favored by the association would have the governor appoint the State Fire Marshal from a list of three names nominated by a commission consisting of one representative of the Nebraska Firefighters Association, one from the Fire Chiefs Association, one from the Nebraska Underwriters Association and two from the Nebraska State Volunteer Firemen's Association.

To get on the November, 1974 ballot, the initiative petition will have to get 31,313 registered voters to sign before July 5. Signatures will have to be distributed so to reflect 5% of the vote for governor in the 1970 election in each of 38 counties.

However, Fisher said the association regards the petition drive as its second choice for changing the method of nawing the fire marshal. Their first efforts will be directed at getting it changed by the 1974 Legislature. If that fails, the association will resort to the costlier petition dirve, he said.

Speaking for the association, Fisher claimed that Pluta has "poor rapport" with fire officials across the state and has been "a dictator" in his dealings.

"We've never had a problem like this before," Fisher said referring to previous fire marshals. Pluta was chosen for the post, Fisher said, not because of merit but through political connections.

Fisher also criticized Pluta for poor internal organization, evidenced he said by the "high turn-over rate" among Pluta's deputies. Fisher estimated that 27 counties presently do not have representatives of the fire marshal's office.

The Volunteer Firemen's Association, Fisher said, wanted the National Life Safety Code to stay on the law books. The strict code, which delineated structural and procedural necessities for adequate fire safety, was repealed by the 1973 Legislature after county and city officials complained that it would be unduly expensive to bring condidtions in jails and courthouses up to standards.

In repealing the code, the Legislature directed Pluta to draw up his own code without several of the objectionable features of the old code. An attorney general's opinion indicated that Pluta could reinstitute the old code under a strict interpretation of the law; however, Pluta did not.

Pluta was unavailable for comment.

Highways Dangerous

. . . One Death Reported

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

Snow continued early Wednesday morning in a treacherous winter storm that raged over Nebraska Tuesday, causing one death and dumping more than 10 inches of snow in Lincoln and more than eight inches in Scottsbluff and Mullen.

In Gering, the Associated Press reported Mrs. Twila Cook, 61, had a heart attack while shoveling snow. The Gering Fire Department rescue squad was summoned, but the Cook woman was pronounced dead at her home.

The National Weather Service (NWS) reported an end to the near blizzard conditions in south-central and southeastern Nebraska, but issued a heavy snow warning with accumulations of up to 12 inches expected in Lincoln.

Thunderstorm 'Strange'

A thunderstorm accompanied the storm in Lincoln Tuesday night, a phenomenon a weather service official called "real strange" It apparently was caused by a warm air pocket moving in aloft, he said.

In Nebraska, the moderate to heavy snow was generally south of a line from Omaha to Hastings to McCook, and bitter cold ranged over the state with wind chill factors from 10 below to 25 below zero. Actual temperatures ranged from 10 in the northwest to the low 20s in the southeast.

The State Patrol reported snowplows working on U.S. 77 near Lincoln "gave up" and were also bogged down by fuel shortage problems.

The patrol reported Highway 6 at Fairmont was closed, as well as Highway 15 just south of Seward. The patrol discouraged motorists from traveling, except in emergencies, particularly on Interstate 80 from Omaha to about North Platte.

Capitol Closes

In Lincoln Tuesday, the State Captiol closed shop about 3:30 p.m. and most employes went home early. State Personnel Director William C. Peters said Tuesday night as far as he knew, State Capitol employes were to report to work Wednesday morning.

Snow Emergency

Mayor Sam Sckwartzkopf declared a snow emergency shortly before 8:00 p.m. Tuesday. So far, the only streets included are snow routes, arterials and bus routes.

Stores likewise closed their doors to hardy Christmas shoppers. Brandeis department store in downtown Lincoln closed about 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, according to S. J. Marchese, general manager. "We would have closed earlier, " he said, "but we wanted to give employes a chance to notify spouses and get rides home."

John Campbell, president of Miller & Paine, said both the downtown and Gateway stores closed about 5:30 p.m. Tuesday "and I'm glad we did." He said most other stores followed suit.

The storm caused no reported problems for utilities in Lincoln or in the state. Spokesmen for Lincoln Electric System and the Lincoln Telephone Co. reported operations were normal.

Numerous Mishaps

But the near blizzard conditions in Nebraska Tuesday night accounted for numerous fender-benders and one truck-train collision.

In Oshkosh, Garden County Deputy Sheriff Eugene Santero said Marvin L. Uden, 28, Hastings, was unable to stop the pickup truck he was driving down a snow-packed incline near Lewellen and collided with a Union Pacific train during the storm Tuesday. There was about $1,800 damage to the truck, Santero said, but no one was injured.

Police in Ogallala, Alliance and Grand Island reported numerous car accidents in the storm, several drivers sitting out the weather in their cars, and some abandoned cars.

Tuesday night, Papillion reported more than six inches of snow; Hastings, Lexington, Ogallala and Plattsmouth, about three inches; Seward, Sidney and York, more than four inches; Thedford, five inches; Omaha, more than two inches; and Taylor, 4½ inches.

In Lincoln, spokesmen for Greyhound and Continental Trailways bus lines said some buses were running behind schedule, but the storm caused no cancellation of runs.

An Amtrak official said the eastbound passenger train was late running through Nebraska, after losing time in a Colorado storm.

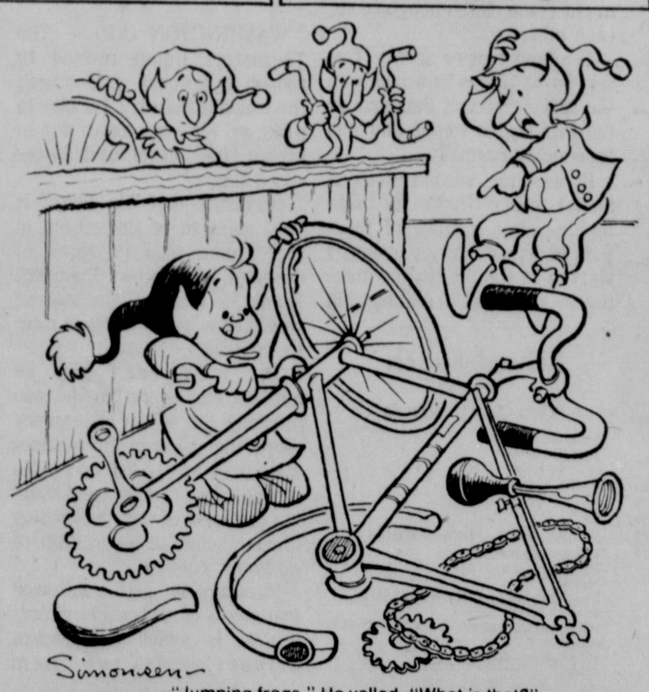

United Air Lines and Frontier Airlines spokesmen said all Lincoln flights, both incoming and outgoing, were cancelled Tuesday.

JUNIPERPERPER

The Elf Who Couldn't Do Anything Right

CHAPTER 7

By Bob Boyle

"Jumping frogs," He yelled. "What is that?"

Juniperperper was awake long before Mrs. Santa came into the elves' dormitory banging her wooden spoon on the dishpan.

"I'm awake," he whispered to her.

"I hope you're this quick every morning," Mrs. Santa said.

Santa came to the table and said, "Hi there, Juniperperper. Ready for your first day?"

"You bet I am," he replied. "And, Santa, I'll do a good job for you."

"I'm sure you will, Juniperperper," he replied.

After a breakfast of snockers (pancakes with strawberry curl rings), sausage and eggs and hot chocolate, the elves left for work.

Santa said to Juniperperper, "I'll walk over to the bicycle shop with you and introduce you to the foreelf. He'll show you your job."

Once inside the bicycle factory, Santa called over the foreelf, Jupiter, and said, "Jup, this is Juniperperper. I'm sure you've met him. He'll work in the bicycle factory."

"Hi, Juniperperper," Jupiter said. "Welcome aboard. Do you have any experience with bicycles?"

"Oh, no," Juniperperper said.

Santa said, "Well, fellows. I'll leave you two now. Juniperperper you do a good job, okay?"

"Bye, Santa," Juniperperper said. "and, don't worry."

After Santa left, Jupiter took Juniperperper to the assembling room and said, "Well, Juniperperper here is where we assemble the bicycles. I'm sure you know how they work, so today you can easily assemble them.

Jupiter gave Juniperperper some pliers, a hammer, a screwdriver and a gammer. "Use this gammer carefully," he said.

"What's a gammer, Jupiter?" Juniperperper asked. "I never heard of that."

"That's what we use to put the spokes in the wheels," Jupiter explained.

"I'll leave you alone now because I must check the rest of the factory. When I return, I'll check your work. Lots of luck, Juniperperper."

"Gee," he thought. "I never put a bicycle together but it seems simple.

He attached the chain.
He placed the handlebars.
He applied the pedals.
He put on the wheels.
He attached the seat.

Just then, Jupiter came back into the room.

"Jumping Frogs," he yelled. "What is that?"

"That's my bicycle," Juniperperper said. "See, I've finished it."

"My, oh my, oh my," Jupiter said. "I've never seen such a mess in my life. This is terrible, terrible, terrible. I must call Santa."

"Santa," he said, after he had placed a call on the red emergency phone, "We're in big trouble over here in the bicycle factory. You'd better get over here."

Santa ran all the way to the bicycle factory and when he entered, he called, "What happened? Was anyone hurt? What happened?"

Jupiter said, "No, Santa. No one was hurt, but look at this."

Santa was stunned.

The handlebars were where the wheels should be.

The seat was on the bottom.

The chain was wrapped around the wheels.

The wheels were on top.

"That is the most mixed-up bicycle I've ever seen," Santa said. "My, oh, my. Well, Juniperperper, it looks as if you need a little more experience before you can work in the bicycle shop."

Juniperperper began to fill up with tears.

"Now, don't cry, little elf," Santa said. "I'm sure we'll find a great place for you to work. I know that not everyone can put bicycles together."

"I'm sorry, Santa," Juniperperper said. "I tried so hard."

"I know," Santa said. "Now this afternoon we'll start you working in the toy fire engine factory. I'm sure you'll do better there."

"You bet I will, Santa," Juniperperper said.

"Oh, hear that," Santa said. "There's the lunch whistle bird, so let's go into lunch and afterward I'll take you to the toy fire engine shop."

"Thank you Santa," Juniperperper replied as they left.

Future Prices Of Food Are Unpredictable, Economist Says

Washington (UPI) — The fuel crisis and international politics have made future food prices unpredictable, an Agriculture Department food economist, Larry V. Summers, said Tuesday.

"The demand for food, both at home and abroad, could be weakened if overall economic activity slows and widespread unemployment develops" as a result of the fuel shortage, Summers said in remarks prepared for the Agricultural Outlook Conference. The result could be lower food prices.

"Conversely, uncertainty concerning fertilizer and fuel supplies and increased costs associated with producing and marketing food could result in supply reductions and upward price pressure," he said.

In addition, he said, the international trade and monetary situation also contributes to uncertainty over food prices beyond the next few months.

In past years, he said, large inventory crops such as grain served as a buffer against shortages and cut down on speculative demands for those commodities. In obvious reference to huge Soviet purchases of U.S. grain, Summers said stocks are now down to near minimum levels "and increased crop output merely restores supply to a rather precarious balance with demand."

Terrorists Release Hostages, Get 'Free Passage'

(c) New York Times News Service

Tokyo Eager To Extend Loan

Cairo — Reacting to Arab oil power, Deputy Premier Takko Miki of Japan said in Cairo, after meeting with President Anwar El-Sadat, that Tokyo was eager to extend to Cairo a 25-year loan of $100-million to assist in widening and deepening the Suez Canal. He also indicated that Japan would like to participate in a wide range of economic and industrial projects in Egypt, including joint-venture factories.

Gas Rationing Authority Agreed

Washington — Senate and House negotiators agreed to give President Nixon unrestricted authority to implement gasoline rationing, without Congress's approval. They also agreed to allow the President to order other energy conservation measures until June 30, subject only to veto by either House. After June 30, the president would have to seek specific new legislation for any further energy conservation moves, except gasoline rationing. (More on Page 3.)

Agnew Asks For Second Chance

Annapolis, MD. — Spiro T. Agnew asked Maryland's judiciary to give him a second chance at the practice of law — a chance, he said, to "resume a useful place" and, perhaps, "attempt to bring credit" to his state and profession.

GAO Asks For Closer Controls

Washington — General Accounting Office, reporting on its review of federal spending on President Nixon's private residences, called for congressional action to provide closer control over and greater public disclosure of such expenditures in the future. (More on Page 51.)

Elephant May Flatten Demos

Washington — Democratic officials preparing for the 1974 congressional elections are fearful that if the Republican elephant stumbles over Watergate it might fall on top of some Democrats. Despite widespread Republican dread that the Watergate scandal and a troubled economy represent potential disaster for the Republicans next year — and general Deomcratic glee over that prospect — Democratic strategists are far from sanguine.

Teamsters Demand Contract Reopening

Dita Beard Won't Be Called

New York — The Watergate special prosecutor has decided not to call Mrs. Dita D. Beard as a witness before the Watergate Grand Jury, after two psychiatric examinations of the former lobbyist for the International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. Mrs. Beard had been considered a potentially important witness in establishing ITT's controversial relationship with the Nixon administration. (More on Page 51.)

Surrender Ends Voyage Of Terror

World News

KUWAIT (AP) — Five Arab terrorists released 12 hostages unharmed from a hijacked jetliner Tuesday and surrendered with fingers held high in victory signs. The surrender ended a voyage of terror that began 30 hours earlier in Rome with fire bombs and bullets that eventually took 32 lives, many of them Americans.

The pilot of the hijacked Lufthansa jet, with a gun held to his head, landed despite the closing of the airport in this Persian Gulf oil sheikdom. The Boeing 737 smashed through several jeeps placed on the runway as obstacles.

Only after the surrender was it learned the terrorists, who killed 30 of their victims in a fire bomb attack in Rome on a Pan American jetliner, had bluffed about killing a number of hostages during their first stop in Athens.

"The hostages are all safe and sound," said the West German ambassador, Hans-Helmut Freundt, hours after the landing of hijacked West German jet.

"We are Palestinian Arabs, proud of what we did," one of the terrorists told newsmen. "We are not criminals. The criminals are those who bomb Palestinian refugee camps in Lebanon."

A 22-year-old stewardess among the Lufthansa hostages said the ordeal was a nightmare.

"It was in Athens the nightmare got worse, and before our horrified eyes they killed one of the Italian hostages — then threw him out of the plane through the half-opened door," said the stewardess, Claude Poinsard, 22. She is a French national working for Lufthansa.

She said the rest of the reported killings in Athens were faked to pressure their demands for release of two Palestinian prisoners.

The five gunmen surrendered to Kuwait's interior and defense minister, Sheik Saad al-Abdullah, more than three hours after the plane landed following a flight from Damascus, airport sources said.

There were conflicting reports over the terms of the surrender.

Lufthansa officials in Cologne reported the gunmen gave up in return for free passage to an undisclosed destination. But Kuwaiti officials had said that the surrender was unconditional.

The terrorists' attack began Monday morning at Rome's Fiumicino airport. They sprayed a lounge in the terminal building with machine-gun fire, killing an Italian policeman.

Then two of the terrorists tossed incendiary bombs into the Pan American Boeing 707 jetliner loading for a flight to Beirut and Tehran. Aboard the plane was an American tour group organized by the Arabian American Oil Co. to visit relatives working for the company in Saudi Arabia.

An undetermined number of persons were wounded in the shooting and firebombing.

After the fire bomb attack, the hijackers grabbed their hostages and the Lufthansa jetliner, setting out on the journey that took them to Athens and Damascus before the final stop in Kuwait.

The French stewardess said the Lufthansa crew heard the shooting at the Rome airport.

"We tried to close the doors," she said. "But it was too late."

She said the gunmen pushed people inside the plane and gave orders to take off immediately.

The stewardess said the terrorists tricked the captain into thinking his copilot had been killed during the stop in Athens.

"They took him out of the cockpit, fired into the air and announced he was dead," the stewardess said. The pilot, who apparently believed the terrorists were carrying out all their threats, had radioed in a frantic voice that four of the hostages had been executed.

The plane headed east and tried to land at Beirut airport, but police blocked the runways with cars and buses. In reply to the hijackers' plea that the jet was running out of fuel, the airport control tower said, "Under no circumstances can you land here."

The jet finally landed in Damascus, where the hijackers requested food, fuel and first aid for their wounded comrade. All their requests were complied with, but the gunmen refused appeals from Syrian air force chief Maj. Gen. Naji Jamil to release their hostages.

Later Tuesday, the hijacked plane was denied landing rights in Baghdad, Iraq, and the Persian Gulf sheikdoms of Dubai and Bahrain.

With the Geneva peace conference due to start Friday, Arab governments denounced the guerrillas' tactics as an atrocity that harmed the Palestinian cause by portraying Palestinian Arabs as terrorists rather than victims of Israeli aggression.

Some Arab newspapers in Beirut, Cairo and Damascus said the hijacking was not carried out by Palestinians but by mysterious forces seeking to scuttle the Geneva peace talks.

In Washington, President Nixon said such terrorist action "can only delay the day when peace and justice may return to the Middle East."

Skylab Trio Has A Ferocious Problem

Space Center, Houston (AP) — Gastric problems often have bothered American astronauts. But the Skylab 3 crew appears to have more gas on the stomach than most.

So much so, that astronaut William R. Pogue estimates he passes gas about 500 times a day.

When Mission Control asked the crew what they considered their most disconcerting personal hygiene proble, Pogue replied:

"We have to pass so much gas. I don't want to pass over the flatus problem lightly because I think (passing gas) about 500 times a day is not a good way to go. It's just not a nice thing.

"It offends people around you, and the only redeeming feature is that everybody else is passing the same amount of gas," Pogue said. "It's a good thing we've got some charcoal cannister taking the stuff out."

Space agency doctors say the problem is caused by a combination of weightlessness, the astronauts' diet and bubbles that form in the drinking water.

Curtis, Hruska Back Losing Side

Washington (AP) — Nebraska's Republican Sens. Roman Hruska and Carl Curtis both sided on the losing side of a 53-26 vote by which the Senate opted Tuesday to invoke its cloture rule and cut off debate on the bill to reinstate the U.S. embargo on Rhodesian chrome imports.

Soviets Launch Two Men To Check Redesigned Ship

MOSCOW (AP) — For the first time in the history of space travel, the United States and the Soviet Union had men orbiting the earth at the same time on Tuesday.

The Russians sent the spacecraft Soyuz 13 into orbit with two rookie cosmonauts on board. Three Americans are orbiting in Skylab 3.

The Soviet objective was to check systems aboard a redesigned Soyuz spaceship scheduled to link up with an American Apollo craft in 18 months.

The Soyuz 13 launch came on the 33rd day of a planned 84-day Skylab mission, and in a message from space, the three U.S. astronauts wished the Russians "smooth sailing." U.S. space officials in Houston said it was too early to tell if the two craft might come close enough to see each other.

The Soviet news agency Tass said Soyuz 13 was launched from the space center at Baikonur on the Kazakhstan steppe and was functioning normally.

It was the second manned Soviet space flight in three months after a lapse of more than two years. Soviet scientists worked in the interval to make the Soyuz a safe and reliable ship that could take part in the 1975 Soviet-American joint flight after the Soyuz 11 mission ended in the deaths of three cosmonauts in June 1971.

Soyuz 12 commander Vasily Lazarev, whose flight last September was the first test of the redesigned spacecraft, was at the space center to wish the two new cosmonauts a "successful flight and, of course, a soft landing."

Less than two hours after the launch, Soviet television showed pictures of the Soyuz 13 commanders, air force Maj. Pyotr Klimuk, 31, and his flight engineer, Valentin Lebedev, also 31.

The Soviets did not announce how long Soyuz 13 would stay aloft and gave no indication if other crews or other ships would be involved in the mission. From the start of predecessor Soyuz 12, the Soviets had said that mission would last only two days.

U.S. space sources said a Salyut space station was launched on Nov. 30 and that the new Soyuz might try a link-up.

Among the jobs listed for Soyuz 13 was to check the spacecraft's systems and test manual and automatic controls, and "methods of autonomous navigation in various flight conditions."

Teamsters Union Moves To Reopen Its Contract

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Teamsters union moved to reopen its national contract with the trucking industry Tuesday to make up for wage losses due to higher fuel costs and lower speed limits.

Declaring that his union is "not going to be singled out to carry more than its share of sacrifice," Teamsters President Frank E. Fitzsimmons said he would seek higher mileage rates for long-haul drivers.

The union chief said he notified employers that he was invoking the 60-day emergency reopening clause in the contract which provides for the renegotiation of wages and hours "in the event of war, declaration of emergency or imposition of economic controls."

Fitzsimmons' action followed two weeks of sometimes violent protest in which independent drivers, many of them Teamsters members, blocked highways and curtailed operations to protest soaring diesel fuel prices and lower highway speed limits.

A spokesman for Trucking Employers, Inc., bargaining arm of the trucking industry, indicated the employers would be willing to sit down and discuss the issue.

The trucking companies would probably pass on any cost increases to shippers, provided the Interstate Commerce Commission approved.

Long-haul truck drivers, who are paid by the mile and average about $25,000 a year, estimate that the imposition of lower speed limits will reduce their annual earning by 15 to 20 per cent.

In addition, independent drivers with their own rigs have to pay all expenses, including fuel, which has risen sharply in price in recent weeks.

Nixon To Have Free Hand

. . . Conferees Considering Energy Measures

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate-House conferees considering emergency energy legislation agreed Tuesday to give President Nixon a free hand in ordering immediate energy conservation measures, including gasoline rationing.

As described by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., head of the Senate conferees, the compromise measure does not permit a congressional veto of presidential orders to ration gasoline or any other scarce fuel.

Other energy conservation measures, including shorter working hours and forced car pooling, also could be put into effect immediately, but Congress could veto them within 15 days after returning from the year-end break, Jackson said.

Jackson said further energy conservation plans, proposed after March 1, could not take effect until Congress has had 15 days to veto them. A simple majority of the House or Senate would be sufficient for a veto.

After June 30, any White House fuel-saving measures would have to take the form of legislation to be acted on by Congress, Jackson said.

Jackson also said the conferees had included language specifically prohibiting the administration from making any tax or fee-added scheme part of a rationing program.

Jackson said, as he has before, that a measure banning busing of school children beyond their neighborhood schools would be stripped from the bill, as would a ban on petroleum exports to Indochina.

He said other controversial provisions, including restrictions on excess profits earned by oil companies as a result of fuel shortages, would be put off for more study.

But he said conferees have agreed on a provision temporarily creating the Federal Energy Administration requested by the President.

The degree of congressional control over White House energy plans had been seen as one of the major differences between the Senate and House versions of the bill.

The bill passed early Saturday morning by the House would have given Congress the power to amend and approve or disapprove any energy conservation measure ordered by the President. The Senate bill had simply given either body 15 days to veto a proposed plan.

A representative of the Office of Management and Budget, stressing that he was not authorized to speak for the President, told reporters he thought Nixon "could live with" the conferees' compromise.

In other Capitol Hill action related to the energy crisis, the Senate Armed Services Committee approved a resolution to permit immediate production of oil for military use from the Elk Hills Naval Petroleum Reserve in California.

The resolution would permit production of up to 160,000 barrels a day for a year. The military uses about 625,000 barrels of oil daily and is drawing 300,000 barrels each day from domestic civilian supplies to make up for oil embargoed by Arab nations.

Continuing the rush to clear its calendar before recessing, the House and Senate acted on several measures in addition to the energy legislation.

The Senate agreed by a vote of 54 to 37 to reimpose an embargo on imports of chrome ore from Rhodesia. Sen. Harry F. Byrd, Ind.-Va., who sponsored a 1971 amendment that led to resumption of such imports, led efforts to block the bill.

Before the 1971 amendment succeeded, the United States had adhered to a 1968 United Nations embargo against trade with Rhodesia. The embargo was approved after the African nation declared independence from Great Britain, placing its five million blacks under the control of 243,000 whites.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee approved a House-passed bill authorizing $2.2 billion in emergency aid for Israel. The measure was opposed by Chairman J.W. Fulbright, D-Ark., and Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont. Fulbright said it would jeopardize Arab-Israeli peace talks by indicating one-sided support of Israel.

The Senate also approved and sent to the House two measures giving Congress broad powers to compel the President to submit to House and Senate subpoenas and provide executive branch witnesses and documents.

Under the measures, the federal courts are given jurisdiction to rule on the validity of House and Senate subpoenas.

The actions are companions to a bill that became law at midnight Monday granting the U.S. District Courts here jurisdiction over suits on the enforcement of subpoenas issued by the Senate Watergate committee for presidential tapes and documents.

A compromise five-year $375-million bill to encourage group health plans was passed by the House and sent to the Senate. It would encourage creation of a limited system of group health plans called "health maintenance organizations," based on a prepaid, group practice concept.

Doctor care, hospital service, preventive and emergency care would be included.

Syria To Boycott Talks

By The Associated Press

Syria announced Tuesday it will boycott the Middle East peace talks in Geneva. But Egypt and Israel went ahead with plans to attend and United States officials predicted they would make progress.

The government statement in Damascus said Syria would not take part in the conference opening Friday in view of "maneuvers intended to serve Israeli interests."

The government stated it made the decision following weekend talks with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy, who was in Damascus Monday.

In Geneva, a senior Egyptian diplomat confirmed that Egypt still intended to take part and said Egypt's delegation would arrive Wednesday. However, other Arab diplomatic sources said the Syrian decision might bring a last-minute Egyptian withdrawal and the collapse of the conference.

U.S. officials traveling with Kissinger said in Madrid they believed Egypt and Israel could make progress on troop pullbacks even without Syria.

The officials said Kissinger had been told by Syrian President Hafez Assad that there was a possibility Syria would not send a delegation to Geneva. However, they added, Kissinger was advised by the Soviets and the Egyptians that Syria would probably attend.

In Jerusalem, the Israeli Foreign Ministry said Israel would attend the conference despite the Syrian boycott. The Israelis had said earlier they would not deal with the Syrians unless they presented a list of some 102 Israeli prisoners of war they are believed holding.

Foreign specialists in Damascus said they believe Syria decided to stay away from the conference after Kissinger failed to give Assad assurances of an Israeli withdrawal from all occupied territories or assurance concerning restoration of Palestinian rights.

Assad has stressed repeatedly that Syria will accept no settlement that does not include these basic demands.

U.S., Soviets To Chair Talks

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union will be joint chairmen of the Middle East peace conference in Geneva, the United Nations announced Tuesday.

U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim will preside at the opening of the conference on Friday.

IN PERSPECTIVE

By WILLIAM O. DOBLER

Once again, the Mediterranean area, Italy and Greece in particular, has become a focal point of world horror. While much of the area is a natural paradise, Arab terrorists turned it Monday into a nightmare of fear and death.

The Rome airport shootout, the murder of passengers aboard a waiting jet there and the execution in Greece of hostages aboard a hijacked West German jet are a bizarre series of events that leave civilized people stunned. And of course, it again spotlights the mess of things man has made out of the Middle East.

The terrorist Arab group has been denounced by official Palestinian liberation organizations but who can deny a part of the blame for what happened Monday? When violence is the official language and often the official action of responsible leadership, a response in kind is not exactly unexpected.

When world leaders seek a solution to world problems at the point of a gun, they might expect that the rank and file of people will follow suit. And that has certainly been the pattern of things in the Middle East — an eye for an eye and a pound of flesh at every opportunity.

The first parties to this violence are the Arab states and Israel, with Russia and the U.S. following in close order. Perhaps we have dwelled too long and too hard on the difficulties of finding peace in the Middle East.

Perhaps as the Geneva Conference between Israel and Arab nations opens, we have already prejudiced the outcome by constant talk of insurmountable difficulties. There are no insurmountable difficulties there, however, only men with a warped sense of values and a distorted nationalism.

The solution to the Middle East problem is really quite simple, as there is room enough in the area for all conflicting parties. That simple solution is for all nations there to agree to the sovereignty of the other.

The border between the U.S. and Canada would amount to nothing were it not for mutual respect of one another. There is no magic that keeps the U.S. and Canada from each other's throats; there is simply an honest recognition of the rights and integrity of both countries.

Ultimately, this is what will have to happen in the Middle East if the peace of the world is not to be constantly threatened there. It will have to happen if we are to have any chance of eliminating the kind of sick political terrorism that claimed so many innocent lives in Italy and Greece.

One can understand, to a degree, the difficulty of achieving such a mutual respect among nations in the Middle East but, to a greater degree, that difficulty is baffling. It is baffling simply because the choices are so much in contrast and so obvious.

The choice is literally life or death. Further, it is between the utilization of resources and wealth for the benefit and enrichment of mankind or for the deterioration and destruction of mankind.

The Arab terrorists in Italy are sick but so is the leadership in the Middle East when it becomes so filled with distrust and hatred that it discards all its human dignity, which it has clearly done. The worst thing about the Arab oil embargo, for instance, is not the hardship it causes throughout the world but the state of mentality it represents on the part of those who inaugurated it.

It would help a great deal, of course, if the U.S. and Russia finally put their foot down hard and with finality on the side of peace and against any further military actions in the area.

'Very Interesting'

Who Chooses The Players?

Gov. Exon's decision to endorse one candidate for his party's nomination for lieutenant governor long before the primary election is interesting from at least two standpoints.

One is the surprise element. While speculation as to the governor's running mate preference hadn't even touched on Hastings attorney Gerald Whelan, Whelan just happens to be one of the most able Democrats in the state. Exon would have been hard pressed to pick a better candidate.

It is also interesting in light of the fact that in 1974, for the first time in Nebraska, voters will be electing a governor and lieutenant governor as a team. And according to law, they will govern as a team. No more Democratic governor and Republican lieutenant governor or vice versa.

There being no declared Republican gubernatorial candidate at this point, it can't safely be speculated upon as to how the GOP will handle the question of a running mate.

But Exon, by his decision this week, has set a precedent of sorts in light of the new law.

Exon did tell the other leading lieutenant governor prospects that his decision should not preclude any of them from seeking the nomination if they wished to do so. And if any of them emerged as the nominee over Whelan, Exon's choice, the governor assured them he would work with the winner in a spirit of cooperation.

Still, the governor has effectively limited the voters, choice in the matter by taking the calculated risk of personally endorsing once candidate. Certainly the voters in the Democratic primary still have a decision to make. But many good party members may feel a sense of obligation to follow the governor's lead. And several candidates who only days ago were hopeful of making a name for themselves in state politics may drop out of the running entirely. The spirit of the democratic process has been diminished somewhat.

It might be better if gubernatorial candidates publicized a slate of two or more acceptable running mates. In that way the voters might at least feel they had more of a choice. And the gubernatorial candidate would have less chance of being put in an awkward position if the voters exerted their independence and chose someone other than whom he endorsed.

What could develop under the present arrangement is a rather meaningless primary election for lieutenant governor nominees.

Expanded Bus Service Elsewhere

Elsewhere across the nation, various cities are making special efforts to attract riders to their public transportation systems by offering discount fares, free rides or expanded service.

This, of course, is to encourage the use of public transportation instead of cars in order to conserve fuel.

Examples: The Chittendon County, Vermont, Transit Authority used to stop buses at 6 p.m. daily. Now it runs them up till 10 p.m. The authority also added Saturday service and it reports that buses in the area are operating on a standing-room-only basis. Everett, Wash., residents can ride for free anytime on buses within the city limits under a plan that started Thanksgiving Day and runs through December. The Transit manager in Everett said ridership has increased by two or three times. He said the energy crisis was a major reason for the program, but added that the city plans to expand its bus service in January and wanted to get people in the habit of using mass transit. A similar situation exists in Los Angeles. "We think that even before President Nixon's Nov. 8 energy speech people were looking to mass transit," a spokesman in Los Angeles said.

Here at home, the Lincoln Transportation System suffered a significant cutback in service last month, ostensibly due to the fuel shortage. It has become apparent, however, that enough fuel will be made available to public transportation systems that drastic cutbacks in service will not have to be made, and in fact, expanded service can be implemented.

It appears as if people around the country are responding favorably to public transportation, especially if the incentives are there.

Hopefully local officials will not disregard the increased ridership enjoyed by transit systems in other cities as they contemplate the Lincoln Transportation System's immediate future.

Siphoning Navy Oil

WASHINGTON — The Navy suspects that commercial oil companies may be siphoning oil from both its Teapot Dome field in Wyoming and the larger Elk Hills reserve in California.

A few weeks ago, Standard Oil of California opened up five new wells just north of the government's Elk Hills field. These wells are now producing between 10,000 and 30,000 barrels a day.

The Navy is concerned that the oil is actually being drained from Elk Hills. By the geological "law of capture," oil will run to a nearby well like water toward a drain.

The Navy has been unable to prove that Socal is pumping military oil. But as evidence of its alarm, the Navy has rushed to create its own drain by sinking three new wells within the Elk Hills field. Two more wells are planned.

The drilling cost the taxpayers an estimated $450,000 per well. This didn't bother Socal which, incredibly, is squeezing profits from both sides of the Elk Hills boundaries. For Socal has a contract to provide the Navy with its drilling equipment and crews.

The Navy would prefer to leave the oil in the ground. But because of Socal's new wells, the Navy is forced to use Socal men and equipment to drill wells it doesn't want.

In Wyoming, three oil companies have been busily drilling oil wells around the infamous Teapot Dome reserve. Representative John Moss, D-Clalif., has charged that the Bureau of Land Management and the Geological Survey let the companies drill illegally.

Meanwhile, President Nixon has recommended that the Navy open its oil reserves for civilian use to help ease the energy crunch. This would mean unparalleled profits for the oil companies involved.

Socal, for example, owns 20% of the Elk Hills oil. Experts in the oil industry estimate that the company would reap more than $1 billion from the commercial opening of Elk Hills.

The Dutch-owned Shell Oil Company would also ring up windfall profits. For the Navy's 80% share of Elk Hills oil must be sold to Shell under a 1970 contract signed by President Nixon. This is worth about $2.6 billion, according to a General Accounting Office estimate.

When President Nixon wanted someone to clear him of income tax irregularities, he personally chose an old friend, Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark.

This has caused some sour comment in the cloakrooms on Capitol Hill. If Congress is going to do the President's financial wash, members have complained, the investigation should have gone through the Senate-House leadership and should never have been assigned by the President to the committee of his choice.

Some congressmen suspect that the President deliberately selected Mills as the committee chairman most likely to whitewash the charges. Consider these facts:

—Mills' own political skirts are soiled. A Mills associate accepted a $15,000 cash contribution from Gulf Oil to help finance Mills' abortive 1972 presidential bid. The cash was transmitted in a sealed envelope from Gulf's Vice President Claude Wild to Mills' crony Carl Arnold who, as it happens, was a lobbyist for the American Petroleum Institute before opening his own lobbying office.

—Gulf pleaded guilty on November 13 to the criminal offense of skimming the contribution from corporate funds. Yet Mills declined to return the $15,000 until we began inquiring into the possibility of federal prosecution. It is a crime punishable by a $10,000 fine and two years in jail to accept a corporate contribution knowingly. Parenthetically, Mills' committee has granted the oil industry tax breaks, which permitted Gulf to get away with a shockingly low 1.2% tax rate in 1972.

—Mills' joint committee whitewashed the Internal Revenue Service by claiming it didn't hound those on the White House "enemies list." A painstaking American Civil Liberties Union study showed just the opposite and a high IRS official has admitted secretly to the Senate Watergate Committee that favors were granted at White House request.

—When a White House task force was about to bring more oil into the United States in 1969 over the objections of most oil companies, Mills fired off a telegram to the task force chief warning against "tinkering with oil imports." The task force was overruled by President Nixon's personal oil advisers.

—When Mills let it be known he had a speaking engagement on the West Coast, Tenneco, the oil and gas behemoth, flew him across the country in a sumptuous private jet. Yet he could have made just as good time in any one of 12 daily scheduled commercial flights.

FOOTNOTE: Mills' office acknowledged he waited a month to pay back the $15,000 after learning it was a criminal contribution. When Gulf requested it, explained a spokesman, Mills paid it immediately with a personal check because his campaign committee had been dissolved. Lobbyist Arnold denied he knew the $15,000 was taken from corporate funds. Gulf's Claude Wild didn't return our calls.

The computer at the National Institutes of Health churned out "yes" to a question about the impeachment of President Nixon. An NIH spokesman confirmed that the code of the printout indeed came from the computer but suggested that the answer was only a prank . . . Not all congressional junketeers tour the beaches and nightclubs. On a recent holiday weekend, Reps. Ed Derwinski, R-Ill., Ed Madigan, R-Ill., George O'Brien, R-Ill., and Vernon Thompson, R-Wis., flew down to the Guantanamo naval base in Cuba and spent two busy days inspecting the isolated outpost . . . Probably the most unusual comeback campaigner in 1974 will be Tom Mechlin who is seeking the U.S. Senate seat denied him 22 years ago in Nevada. He caught the public imagination by hiking through Nevada. At 53, his legs are little stiffer but he plans to leg it through Nevada again.

Holiday Travel Pinch Could Cut Casualties

WASHINGTON — The energy crisis may persuade many Americans to stay rather than go home for the holidays this Christmas season. Both Christmas and New Year's Day fall on Tuesday, when filling stations presumably will be open, but reduced speed limits and gasless Sundays are bound to put a crimp in many a driver's travel plans.

For the individual motorist, that's bad. But for the motorists in general, it could well mean less carnage on the highways. The National Safety Council estimated that between 625 and 725 Americans would die in highway accidents over the four-day Thanksgiving Day weekend. The actual toll was 542. Although the council is not sure why the discrepancy was so great, it notes that nine states had lowered legal speed limits by Nov. 22.

Since then, the fuel pinch has become markedly more painful. The National Safety Council predicts a traffic-death toll of 550-650 for the Christmas weekend, and of 470-570 for the New Year's Day weekend. The Christmas prediction is the same as for last Christmas, while that for this New Year's is slightly higher.

It must be remembered, though, that the two holiday weekends last year were three days long, as compared with four days this year. The council made its 1973 predictions in the expectation that fuel shortages and restrictions on driving speed would have a salutary, if involuntary, effect on highway safety.

Holiday travelers who elect to go by plane rather than by automobile face difficulties, too. The fuel shortage has forced scheduled airlines to cancel many flights. Trans World Airlines, one of the nation's largest, is on strike. Nevertheless, the demand for airline reservations is expected to be as much as 25% greater than last year.

That leaves buses and trains as travel alternatives. Here again, the outlook is far from encouraging. Calls for reservations to Amtrak, the national railway system, jumped from the normal 20,000 a day to 50,000 after President Nixon's speeches on the energy crisis. Although Amtrak is trying to make 61,000 additional seats available for the holiday season — "everything we can lay our hands on," a spokesman said — that may not be enough to satisfy the demand.

The Auto-Train Corp. also reports a sharp increase in business. Auto-Train carries passengers and their cars by rail from Lorton, Va., to Sanford, Fla., and back. All spaces south are booked solid from Feb. 1-17, the corporation reports.

Meanwhile, the energy crisis has spurred efforts in Congress to authorize federal subsidies for urban mass transit operating expenses. Moves in that direction had been stalled because of the Nixon administration's stated opposition to such an approach. But now transit subsidy advocates believe that some form of subsidy legislation can be passed by Congress and meet with the President's approval.

As for the First Family, indications are that this will be a White House Christmas. "People are staying home, buying trees and enjoying it more," Mrs. Nixon said after accepting a North Carolina fir donated to the executive mansion. People intent on traveling may find Christmas less enjoyable than usual this year. But the lessons learned from inconvenience should lead to more intelligent travel plans and happier holidays in 1974.

ANTHONY LEWIS

'It's Going To Last'

BOSTON — Prof. Carroll L. Wilson of M.I.T. is a former general manager of the Atomic Energy Commission and a man with strong connections in the government, business and academic communities. Last July he published in the magazine "Foreign Affairs," an article predicting "a national energy emergency" and suggesting ways to deal with it; some of the ideas and even the language turned up in President Nixon's energy speeches.

For those reasons, Wilson's views are a significant barometer of informed establishment opinion on the energy problem. His views today, after extended travel in Japan and Western Europe and thought about this country's situation, are notably different from what they were a few months ago — and from what remains the official Washington picture of the prospects.

To sum it up, Wilson takes a much more urgent view today of the need for conservation in our use of energy. The difference can be indicated in one comparison.

In "Foreign Affairs" he said the United States should reduce the annual growth in its energy consumption from 2.5% to 3%. He called that "a drastic target."

Today he thinks it will be a struggle for the United States to stay at 1973 levels of energy use, without any growth. "We're going to have to live with a flat energy supply picture," he said, "for quite a few years at best."

Like most experts, he thinks the problem is much deeper than the present Arab oil boycott. It is doubtful that the Arabs would see an economic interest in increasing production, instead of conserving their resource,when they find it hard to use present revenues.

The price of oil, in any case, is likely to force much greater emphasis on conservation in its use.

In his magazine article, Wilson called for emergency action to build new tankers, American "super ports" and refineries. He says wryly now that those ideas are "obsolete," because they are designed to handle increased oil imports that will not exist. Nor does he think it feasible now, as he suggested earlier, to build up an oil reserve.

Wilson still has in mind a technological program he outlined in "Foreign Affairs" to develop new energy sources. But the requirements of capital and engineering are so huge that he does not see any early replacement for the oil missing from projected growth of energy demand and supply.

An example given by Nigel Hawkes, science correspondent of The Observer, London, indicates the scale of development problems — this one on oil from shale rock. To meet a target of one million tons of oil per day from shale by 1985, he said, the United States would have to mine, move and dump 2 million tons of shale every day.

For such reasons, Wilson sees no alternative to drastic changes in our use of energy — something amounting to a revolution in the life style of industrial society. He notes that Japan and the countries of Western Europe have much worse difficulties than the United States because they produce so little of their own energy supply. But Western society in general, he said, faces political tests of quite a new kind.

"Governments are babes in the woods in these things," he said. "People with no experience or institutional knowledge are going to have to make choices in an unbelievably complicated business, the allocation of crude and refined oil.

"There will be all kinds of interruptions in international trade, new forms of government intervention internally, new clashes of national interest. In the short run you're bound to have discontinuities. Their scale is likely to be staggering."

None of this seems to discourage Carroll Wilson.

"I'm an optimist about countries that have the constitutional capacity to solve problems," he said. "Our ingenuity has never been turned on this problem. There simply are no energy conservation experts, for example. I suppose nobody at M.I.T. has had a Ph.D. in energy conservation. That will change.

But Wilson emphasized one essential requirement if American business and universities and others are to respond effectively to the need for energy conservation. That is a general understanding that the oil shortage is not a short-run problem.

"You have to understand that it's going to last," he said. "There are big capital investments here in new technology and new arrangements. Companies won't act unless it is long-run. If we're going to build advantages into our system from this, we're going to have to see it as a condition of life."

The understanding of which Wilson spoke can come only from political leaders; there's the rub. We have a President now whose instinct is to tell the public that everything will be back to normal in a year or so.

One Promise

Lincoln, Neb.

With regard to Doug Mueller's letter of Dec. 14, I submit that he and I should get together for some re-reading sessions. The other day I sat down and re-read "Main Kampf." It's the story about how a little Austrian man intended "to lay his trip" on Europe.

As we all know, he did get a fair chance in trying to make the world a "better place to live" in the name of peace.

I couldn't help thinking how that story is so much like what's going on in our nation today with this Watergate thing. The only real difference that appears immediately is that 30 years ago, people died for ignoring the truth. According to a scientific study done during World War II, Polish Jews refused to believe a prominent townsperson who warned that Jews were being slaughtered by the Germans and not being deported, at all; instead of fleeing, the people chose to believe that Jews were being allowed to leave the country and that their friend was crazy. They died because of the decision they made. Why? According to the theory of cognitive dissonance, when a person holds two conflicting cognitions, ideas, or values, he will do whatever is necessary to resolve the conflict — EVEN IF WHAT HE CHOOSES TO BELIEVE IS CLEARLY NOT IN HIS OWN BEST INTERESTS.

Many Americans are having a fairly traumatic time now whenever they read the paper or listen to the news because they have believed for many years that Mr. Nixon is a law-abiding man who has the American people's best interests in mind above all else. It must be disheartening, to say the least, to have to hear that the President has lied and been caught in his lies; that he has enriched himself while governing in this country's top office; that he takes the responsibility for his secret police ("the plumbers") violating the civil rights of an American citizen; that his vice president, Mr. Agnew, is a felon; that though he earns $200,000 a year, he pays about the amount of tax someone would pay for a $15,000 income; and that he is going to set an example for the conservation of energy by going to Florida after Christmas by train (while the presidential jet will be flying down, anyway, in case it is needed, to the tune of 2,000 gallons of fuel per hour).

Rather than admit to himself that he has been a fool, the average long-standing Nixon supporter would rather believe that the President is being victimized by the press or that a communist conspiracy is out to get him. Some solace can be taken in knowing that to believe these things isn't going to cause the death of millions of Americans.

And now, a new cry: "This is the only country we have. Let's not destroy it ourselves from within." Peculiar, isn't it?

I say, let's make the President keep at least one of his promises: his 1962 promise of "You won't have Dick Nixon to kick around any more!"

IMPEACH & CONVICT

Uniform Holiday Bid May Fail Again

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

It appeared Tuesday that an attempt to obtain uniformity in holiday observance at the County-City Building may fail again this year.

At a meeting of the officials called by the board, County Board Chairman Robert Colin said that the board was trying to figure out a way to work out holidays so that there would be some uniformity between the county and city so the building would either be all opened or all closed.

Last year the board attempted unsuccessfully to get the county officials to observe the same eight holidays as the city and as a result most county offices were closed 11 holidays while the city, with the exception of Municipal Court, was closed only eight.

Colin told the officials that they had talked to the judges in county and district courts and they had agreed to stay open the same dates that the city is open and that the board was asking the elected officials to reconsider and cooperate with the board by observing the eight holidays observed by the city.

He said the board was not denying the employes the additional three days which could be granted each by his department head on a staggered basis.

Last year the elected officials agreed to observe the same 11 holidays observed by the state which included Lincoln's Birthday, Arbor Day and Columbus Day which are not observed by the city.

Assessor Fritz Meyer said that if all county and city offices including the Municipal Court were to remain open those days he would be willing to consider keeping a skeleton crew on those three days but not unless the entire building was open.

Commissioner Jan Gauger said that she had contacted Municipal Court judges but had had no response to a request that they be open on those three days.

However, County Clerk Carl Hartman said that he had checked Tuesday morning with the Municipal Court and that it has already posted the 11 holidays for 1974.

"You're trying to do what the city is doing. You're saying open up the county but you don't give a damn whether all the city including Municipal Court is open or not," Meyer said.

Hartman noted that Municipal Court has the most activity of any office on the city side of the building and noted problems incurred by county offices staying open when Municipal Court was closed.

Several elected officials said they would be willing to cooperate and go along with the eight holidays provided they could give their employes the other three days off at sometime.

However, County Attorney Paul Douglas, who with Sheriff Merle Karnopp and Public Defender T. Clement Gaughan, indicated their offices would have to be open if the courts were, said he would not give his employes the other three days off.

Douglas said that if his deputies are there it is essential that the office have its secretarial staff on duty also.

County Judge Jeffre Cheuvront said he had told the commissioners that if the county board worked something out so there would be some uniformity in holidays the county court would be willing to remain open those other three days but indicated that he felt the employes were entitled to 11 holidays at sometime.

Lancaster District Presiding Judge Herbert Ronin said that the district judges had agreed to go along with eight holidays in order to achieve uniformity throughout the building since closing the 11 holidays is permissive legislation.

County Board Action Deferred On Superintendent Of Schools

Lancaster County commissioners Tuesday deferred action another week on whether to continue the office of Lancaster County superintendent of schools.

According to the commissioners, Commissioner Jan Gauger has asked for a legal opinion from County Attorney Paul Douglas on whether the county can legally contract with one educational service unit in the county to perform the functions now the duty of the county superintendent.

At last week's public hearing on the matter at which no one appeared in favor of discontinuing the office, Superintendent Glenn Turner told the board that the law would prevent the county's contracting with only one educational service unit in the county when there are five.

He said that the school districts to be covered by the educational service unit with which a contract is made to assume the superintendent's duties must be located within that educational service unit so no one unit in the county could contract for the entire area of Lancaster County since there are five units involved.

In other business, the board approved on a two to one vote another application for Sunday off-sale beer.

Only veteran commissioner Kenneth Bourne, who has voted against all applications, voted against the application of Outpost Tavern.

Bourne has contended that there is no need for any additional Sunday off-sale beer establishments in the county.

In other action, the board:

— Approved a $3,000 settlement of claim for damages to a bridge which is estimated to cost $15,000 to replace.
— Referred to the county attorney letters from county engineer regarding county zoning questions.
— Approved the appointment of Walter Hoppe as County Highway Superintendent for the Nebraska Department of Roads in determination of incentive payment.
— Approved the lease and agreement between Lancaster County Public Welfare and Family Service Assn.
— Approved Dec. 26 and Jan. 2 for meeting dates since Christmas and New Year's Day fall on Tuesdays.
— Set Dec. 27 for signing of $900,000 in Industrial Development Act bonds for National Crane expansion.

$120,000 Suit Is Filed For Breach Of Contract

A $120,343.50 suit was filed Tuesday in Lancaster District Court by Floyd A. and Ruth L. Campbell in connection with alleged breach of contract on the part of Revevis B. Stacey, Cinderella Cleaners Inc. and Cinderella Franchises, Inc.

The plaintiffs allege that in August, 1969, as part of a "scheme and conspiracy" the defendants made a number of promises and representations to the plaintiff for the purposes of inducing them to enter into a franchise agreement for the purpose of establishing dry cleaning businesses in Omaha.

According to the petition, the defendants knew that the plaintiffs had a limited amount of capital with which to transact business and that the defendants warranted that the amount would be adequate to handle the immediate and foreseeable cash needs of the plaintiffs.

The plaintiffs contend they purchased a franchise for $39,900 and promised delivery for Sept. 15, 1969 and induced the plaintiffs to lease premises prior to that date.

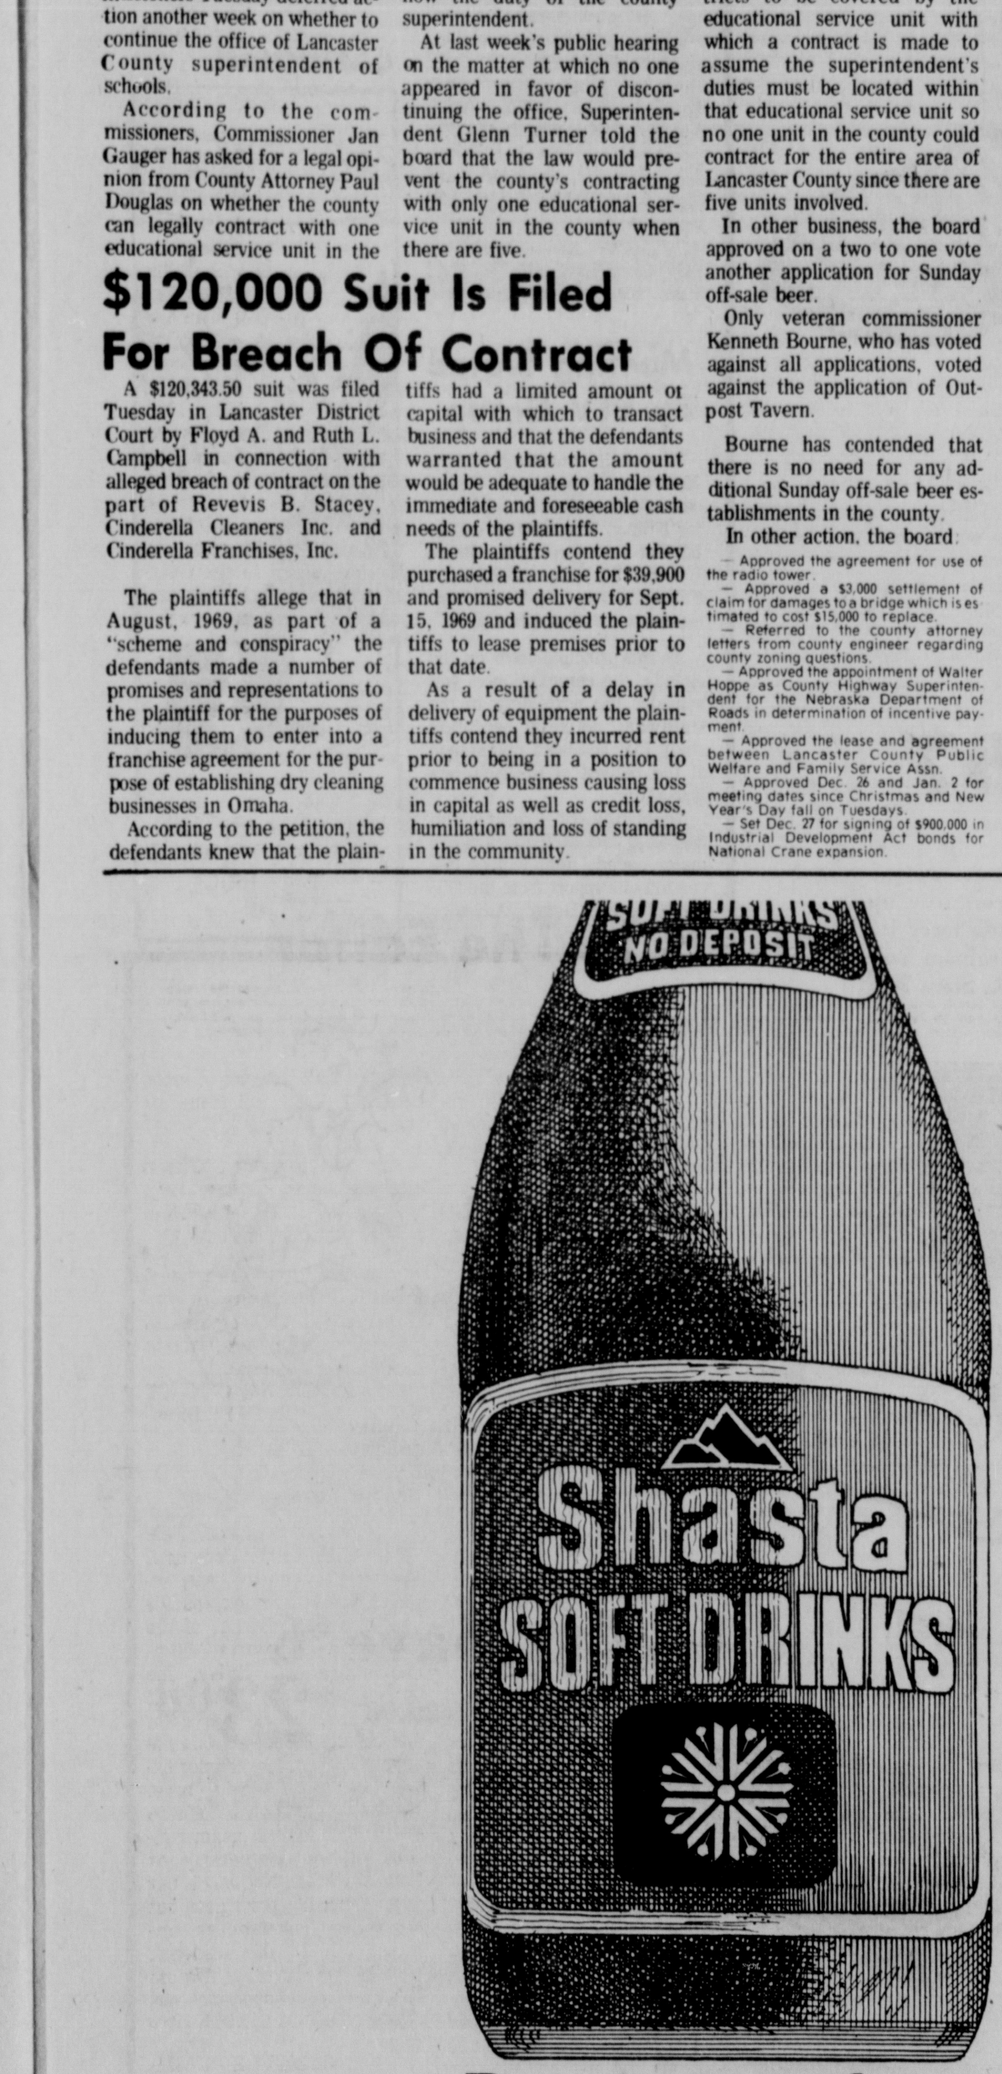

As a result of a delay in delivery of equipment the plaintiffs contend they incurred rent prior to being in a position to commence business causing loss in capital as well as credit loss, humiliation and loss of standing in the community.

Fire Damages 2-Stall Garage

A fire early Tuesday morning caused considerable damage to the interior of two-stall garage at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Brinkman at 810 No. 58th, according to the Lincoln Fire Department.

Fire Inspector Michael Durst said the fire may have been caused when a pickup truck being started by Carl Brinkman backfired and ignited cardboard boxes stored in the garage.

Durst said the Brinkman home also sustained smoke damage.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Forecast For Wednesday

Capricorn has a talent for locating or finding lost objects. This applies especially where antiques are concerned. The Capricorn native exhibits an uncanny sense for knowing where and when to look — and for tracking down what is missing, thrown out or lost. If you are distressed over not being able to find what has been misplaced, dial Capricorn. In no time, the object will be back in your hands and Capricorn will walk off, pleased as punch.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Delve deep into matters that had been obscured. Applies especially where money, cooperative efforts and partnerships enter picture. See in light of actuality. Wishful thinking will not suffice. Get rid of methods which waste, pile up unnecessary expenses.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Pressure could be name of game. Key is to ride with tide. Older individual who pushes is testing your mettle. Let others reveal their style, mode of operation. Be discreet. Organize and plan. But be patient — this is not time for direct action.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Work to finish, complete. Leave no loose ends. Check basics, essentials. Become more aware of diet, energy. Associate who appears aggressive may actually be floundering. Know it and take steps to be more self-reliant.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Good lunar aspect now coincides with creativity, romance, special relationship which can blossom into something meaningful. Leo, Aquarius persons could be featured. Strive to put across your own style. Be independent, dynamic and original.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Trust hunch. Teach and learn. Rise above the petty. Put aside minor differences. Gaining cooperation now is more important than in recent past. Build on solid base. Deal from position of strength, knowledge. Review.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Emphasis is on getting around, being versatile and showing that you can laugh at your own foibles. Don't insist or become a victim of tension. By relaxing, you gain. Those who appear indifferent are merely taking their time. Message will bear good news.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be aware of money details. Protect what you own. Those who attempt to downgrade possessions are confused and envious. Know it and maintain balance. Keep books in order. You will be called upon to produce receipts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Lunar cycle is at peak; make new starts in new directions. Judgment, intuition are on target. Personality sparkles. Wear bright colors. Shake off lethargy. Deal with Gemini, Virgo persons. Be analytical. You will come up with complete, accurate story.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Much that happens takes place "out of view." Means clandestine activities could involve you. Key now is to be diplomatic. Build reservoir of goodwill. Gift purchase now would be timely gesture. Make peace at home.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Accent is on friends, hopes and wishes. Also, gain is indicated through business or professional endeavors. You learn about costs, values. You also receive credit for past efforts. Views are vindicated. You will be in mood to celebrate.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Solid gain, promotion, elevation of standing in community — these are spotlighted. Capricorn could figure prominently in activities. There is challenge and you can meet it. But no one is going to hand you anything on proverbial silver platter.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Favorable lunar aspect coincides now with greater ability to communicate. Write, advertise and publish. Take long-range view. Finish what you start. Be definite; have faith in your creative abilities. You can successfully put across major concept.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are frank, independent, direct. You have way of ingratiating and irritating, almost at one and the same time. Domestic adjustment made in September will work to your advantage. You are on brink of new experience. Your spiritual growth will be featured. February was one of your most significant months — January and October will be important in 1974.

FTC Says Retail Credit Co. Tactics Unfair

Washington (UPI) — A credit reporting company able to develop files on the character, morals and reputation of 98% of the U.S. population has been using unfair and deceptive tactics to dig up its information, the Federal Trade Commission said Tuesday.

The agency said Retail Credit Co., by far the largest operation of its kind in the country, has been forcing its investigators to dig up bad news about people; denying consumers their right to know what's in their credit files; and telling people who buy credit information, such as banks and insurance companies, that its data was based on personal interviews when in fact only telephone conversations were involved in many instances.

The firm, headquartered in Atlanta, said it was "surprised" by the proposed complaint issued by the FTC, and said that to the best of its knowledge it has always been in "full compliance" with the 1971 fair credit reporting act.

J. Thomas Rosch, director of the FTC's Bureau of Consumer Protection, told a news conference he found it hard to believe the company was surprised by the action since it knew it was under investigation for the past two years and even went to court to limit the FTC's access to its records.

Rosch said the firm accounts for 70% to 80% of the credit reporting business in the country and has complete files on the personal lives of 45 million Americans, with the capability of reporting credit information for 98% of the population. He said the "thousands" of insurance companies and prospective employers use the company's information every year. Last year the firm had a gross revenue of $195 million from its 114 credit bureaus and 8,500 investigators.

Rosch said the company's compensation system for investigators "puts a premium on the number of reports gathered at the expense of their accuracy."

The complaint said the company uses "a quota system which requires investigators to develop a certain percentage of adverse information." When some consumers asked the company for the "nature and substance" of the files it had on them — a right guaranteed by the 1971 law — the company sometimes turned down the request, the report said.

The company was accused of failing to conduct follow-up investigations when consumers complained about inaccurate information in their files. Nor has it been letting prior users of the questioned information know that the consumer is disputing it, the report said.

Rosch also said the company "reported fictitious interviews and fictitious observations of its interviewers" as having been done face-to-face when in reality only a telephone was involved.

If the company continues to contend it did not violate the law, the FTC can issue a formal complaint, which could be tried before an administrative law judge and eventually appealed to the full commission and ultimately to the courts.

Vancouver Symphony To Tour China

Ottawa (UPI) — The Vancouver Symphony Orchestra will make a government-sponsored tour of Communist China next year, the office of Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau announced.

The government said it would provide financial support for travel between Canada and China.

Bomb Blasts Injure 60 In London

London (AP) — Four bombs exploded in London on Tuesday. Scotland Yard said Irish guerrillas may have launched a new terror campaign in the British capital.

Police said more than 60 persons were wounded.

A stolen car packed with high explosives blew up in a street jammed with rush hour commuters and a parcel bomb dumped among Christmas mail went off in a sorting office. Two other charges exploded near major prisons.

Fifty-four persons, including 28 women, were injured in the car bomb blast outside Horseferry House, a Home Office building where police and fire department sections are located.

Another six men were wounded later, one with serious eye injuries, in the sorting office blast in the Royal Horticultural Hall only a few hundred yards away.

A bomb went off not far from the Wall of Pentonville prison in north London, wounding two police officers and three other persons, a Scotland Yard spokesman said.

Another bomb detonated near Holloway women's prison, but no casualties were reported.

Security authorities blamed diehard elements of the Irish Republican Army, which is battling the British in Northern Ireland.

Scotland Yard's bomb squad commander, Detective Chief Supt. Roy Habershon, declined to pin the attacks on the guerrillas, but said: "These people have come here to kill and maim."

Home Secretary Robert Carr, minister in charge of Britain's internal security, condemned "those devils who have done this to innocent people."

Habershon, warned that London may be in for another terror campaign like the bombing raids that hit the city earlier this year, killing one man and wounding more than 200 other persons.

The IRA's Provisional wing was blamed for that onslaught.

Two letter bombs were delivered in London Monday. One exploded, wounding army Brigadier Michael O'Cock, a 54-year-old Irish Guards officer who is an aide to Queen Elizabeth II and chief of staff of the London Military District.

"We must obviously expect more," Habershon declared. Agents swooped on London's airports to block a possible getaway route for the bombers.

End Of Strike Voted

NEW YORK (AP) — Cabin attendants voted Tuesday to end a strike that has grounded Trans World Airlines for 43 days.

But it will be late Friday before domestic service is back in full operation and some time Sunday before international service is fully restored.

The precise vote tally was not available immediately, but the approval margin was described by the union as "substantial."

Matthew Guinan, president of the AFL-CIO Transport Workers Union, announced the result of ratification voting by the 5,300 stewards and stewardesses at TWA, represented by Local 550.

The attendants' walkout halted service for 40,500 passengers daily and led to furloughing of 20,000 members of other unions.

A union spokesman said the contract provides a 13½ per cent pay increase over three years with a 5½ per cent increase retroactive to Aug. 1, 1972.

Other benefits include improved medical and life insurance coverage, also extended to retirees and their dependents; free life insurance; improved retirement for disabled flight attendants, and better working conditions, the spokesman said.

The flight attendants struck Nov. 5. All strikers were due back on the job Wednesday.

Drug Reactions Kill 100 Daily, Nader Says

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 100 Americans die daily because of adverse reactions to prescription and legal non-prescription drugs, Ralph Nader told a Senate health subcommittee Tuesday.

Nader also said consumers could save "several hundred million dollars" annually if they could use generic substitutes for brand name pharmaceuticals.

The drugs which are killing people are among the hundreds of different pills recommended to doctors by drug company salesmen, Nader said.

"Thousands of deaths and many more injuries each year in this country for preventable adverse drug reactions — according to the FDA (Food and Drug Administration) — are sufficient reason to stop this lethal huckstering from reaping its grim harvest.

"Even the most conservative estimate of FDA is that there are about 100 Americans dying every day because of adverse drug reaction.

"Add to this an estimated $3 billion per year for institutional care due to adverse drug reactions," Nader said.

He said that while many doctors ignore the sales pitch of drug company detail men, many do not.

Nader said that for a fraction of the billion-dollar institutional cost "a system could be initiated by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to provide objective information to doctors to achieve the end of maximum safety and efficacy and lower cost."

Nader also said pressure by drug companies on state legislatures has prevented substitution of generic drugs for brand name drugs, which Nader said would save consumers hundreds of millions of dollars annually.

"Officials of FDA have stated that there is no significant difference between generic and brand-name antibiotics; all are batch tested by the agency both in bulk and final dosage form," he said.

"After all, senators and congressmen — and indeed the President — receive generics when they enter Walter Reed (Army Hospital in Washington) or the Naval Hospital in Bethesda (Maryland). As Sen. (Philip A.) Hart (D-Mich.,) once remarked, 'if they're good enough for us, why aren't they good enough for the rest of the population.'

"The American Pharmaceutical Association . . . supports repeal of antisubstitution laws and has estimated, if accomplished, more than 10 per cent savings or several hundred million dollars per year, will result."

GM Says It's Nearly Done With Study

Detroit (UPI) — General Motors said Tuesday it has nearly completed an investigation of reports of a possible suspension system defect that could involve 1.8 million 1974-model cars.

A spokesman said GM "expects to make a decision shortly" on whether the cars will have to be recalled if it finds that nuts can come loose on upper control arms. Such a recall would involve every 1974 model GM has built.

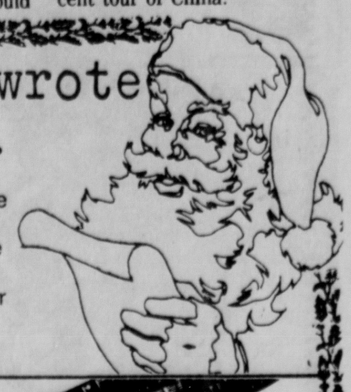

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader has asked the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration to order the automaker to recall the cars, saying the cars are in danger of going out of control if the nuts work loose.

Nader charged "GM has been aware of this problem for some time because of their experience with prototype cars and company-owned production cars."

Curtis, Hruska Vote For Saxbe

Washington (AP) — Sens. Carl Curtis and Roman Hruska, Nebraska Republicans, were among the 75 U.S. senators voting to confirm the nomination of Sen. William B. Saxbe, R-Ohio, to be U.S. Attorney General. Ten senators voted against Saxbe's nomination.

Curse Cause Of Rock Bluff's Decline?

By JOEL THORSON
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Cass County — From the time an Indian chief laid a perpetual curse on it, nothing went right for Rock Bluff. Once a booming river town with a beautiful setting and a grand future, Rock Bluff began tripping over every imaginable obstacle to a town's growth.

Rock Bluff residents feuded with Indians, died in epidemics of malaria, typhoid and ague, lost their bid for the county seat, and were bypassed by the railroad. Along the way they unwillingly helped Nebraska become a state, and were traumatized by two brutal, unsolved murders.

Everything underscored the message: Rock Bluff was an ill-fated town from the start. Residents started moving out, and Rock Bluff began a long and inglorious slide into oblivion.

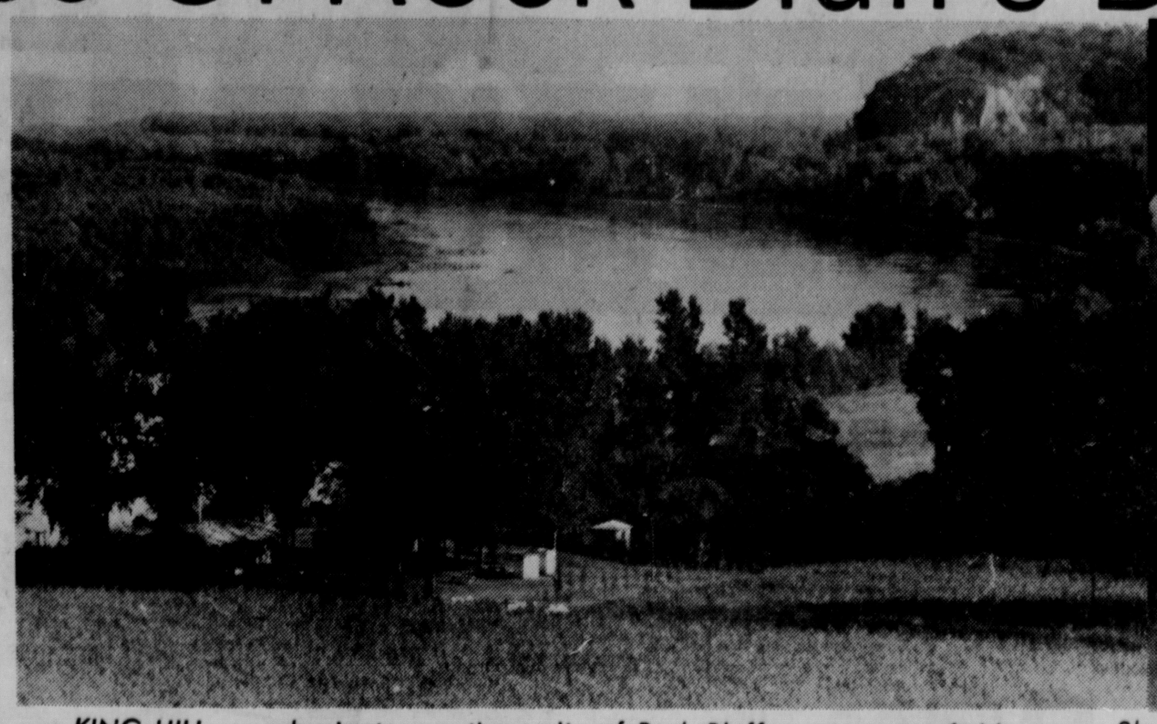

But don't call it a ghost town. Although it's not on your road-map, it's still called home by a handful of persistent old-timers, some of whom feel that the recent arrival of a barge-loading grain elevator and the nearby Beaver Lake development may bring their dimly-remembered hometown back to life.

One such resident is Paul "Pap" Shera. He and his wife Helen live in a 125-year-old house, built in part with square nails, on land encompassing nine Indian burial sites.

The only native Rock Bluff folks left, Shera says, are "my sister (Mrs. Irma Stodola) and I, and Effie down here." Shera is the grandson of one of the original 1856 settlers, and his sister-in-law. Effie Shera is the granddaughter of one of the town's founders.

"A lot of the old-timers have passed on and moved away," says Shera. "Rock Bluff hasn't had a post office for years now. The last store closed in '37 or '38, I believe." The town's school, where Shera got "what education I have," was absorbed by the Murray district.

"But it would have made a nicer county seat than Plattsmouth. It could have had a longer main street," he says, gesturing toward the pleasant green expanse extending from his home to the Missouri River. King Hill, a rocky outcropping looming some 450 feet over the river two miles to the south, was the source of Rock Bluff's name.

Sheras are among handful of remaining residents.

"A more beautiful site could not be obtained from the Platte to the Weeping Water, overlooking, as it does, the river at one of its romantic points," one old newspaper account declared.

And romantic it must have been, located at the mouth of wooded Rock Creek between King Hill and its smaller counterpart on the north, Queen Hill. The two bluffs, landmarks for early river travelers, reputedly derived their names from an Indian fable about lovers from rival tribes who married and reunited their peoples.

"During the steamboat days and after, the population was about 850," Shera continues. "But that was before my time."

During the "steamboat days," riverboats from St. Louis and New Orleans pulled into the Rock Bluff landing regularly. Steamboat fare to St. Joe was $7.

Wagon trains of settlers ferried across the Missouri in wintertime and made their way up Rock Bluff's main street, pausing to purchase provisions for the trip into Nebraska Territory, Denver, and points west. There were numerous shops, churches and saloons to stop at before the trip west, along with a rock quarry, sawmill, brickyard, coal mine, race track and Oddfellows Hall.

A shave and perfume could be had for $1.10; or a boot blacking, shave and mustache curl for $1.05. Other comforts were available as well. One newspaper account described Rock Bluff as "the livest town along the river west (sic) of St. Joe."

Church revivals, baptisms in Rock Creek, baseball games (Rock Bluff 114, Weeping Water 33) and Independence Day celebrations featuring speeches, dancing and barbecues were big events. Tobacco and grapes were raised in the area for a while, as were the first Nebraska sheep.

"Rock Bluff was just as fancy as Omaha at one time," says Cass County Historical Society president Mrs. Alice Perry of Plattsmouth, whose mother was born in Rock Bluff. Mrs. Perry and county superintendent Neil Lancaster are refurbishing the 103-year-old Naomi Institute (later known as the Rock Bluff School) as an annex to the county museum in Plattsmouth.

The school, a dilapidated store and a few other buildings are all that remain of what was one of the most important towns in Nebraska. Main Street is now a cornfield.

Shera thinks Rock Bluff died out because it was bypassed by the railroad. But as local legend had it, the town bore a curse for the way early settlers dealt with the Indians.

Platted in 1856, the town was built on land that two years earlier had belonged to the Otoe and Pawnee. On June 24, 1854, President Franklin Pierce extinguished all Indian claim to it, paying the Indians in provisions. Seventy Otoes died from eating the government's salt pork.

In 1869, after "Indian scares" in Lancaster County, Rock Bluff vigilantes captured three Otoe Indians and 15 ponies.

Two days later the town was besieged by more than 100 Indians. Before the hostages were released, an Indian chief was said to have cursed Rock Bluff and its inhabitants with perpetual suffering.

In 1861 Rock Bluff lost the courthouse to Plattsmouth by a vote of 368-223. Then, in 1870, Rock Bluff was bypassed by the Chicago and North Western, which built its Missouri River Railroad bridge at Plattsmouth instead.

Outcome Of State's First Election Changed:

Election Judges Took Ballots Home

Political skulduggery was not uncommon in territorial Nebraska, and Rock Bluff was no exception. Except, like everything else, it worked out to Rock Bluff's disadvantage.

A voting irregularity in anti-statehood Rock Bluff may have been responsible for Nebraska's admission as a state in 1867, and certainly caused two Republicans, instead of two Democrats, to be sent to Washington as Nebraska's first U.S. Senators.

In the election of June 2, 1866, a state constitution was placed before the voters of Nebraska Territory, along with candidates for the legislature. If the constitution passed, the candidates elected would become the first state legislature and elect two U.S. Senators.

Two Rock Bluff election judges made the mistake of taking the ballot box home with them when they went to dinner and supper.

Although it was proved there had been no tampering with the ballots, the votes — which favored the Democrats — were invalidated by a three-man Republican county board. Since similar irregularities ignored in other precincts which had voted Republican, the skulduggery was on the side of the Republicans, if anybody.

The ruling was enough to send four pro-statehood Republican represnetatives and two pro-statehood Republican senators to the legislature instead of their anti-statehood Democratic opponents, all of whom would have won had not the Rock Bluff votes been thrown out.

The balance in both houses was thus tipped in favor of the Republicans.

Consequently, the legislature in joint session elected Republicans T.W. Tipton and J.M. Thayer to the U.S. Senate instead of J. Sterling Morton and A.J. Poppleton.

"So the whole question whether two Democrats or two Republicans should represent Nebraska in the Senate at Washington was, in the final analysis, whether having the Rock Bluff ballot box at the dinner table vitiated the votes in it," wrote historian Addison E. Sheldon.

Democrats claimed that the constitution would not have passed without the questionable Rock Bluff ruling (which threw out a Rock Bluff majority of 78 opposed to the constitution) and a number of other alleged violations. The 100-vote majority in favor of the constitution and statehood, however.

Had the Democrats lost the statehood issue but retained a majority in the joint legislature, they might have accepted statehood and sent Democratic Senators to Washington. But the J. Sterling Morton-edited History of Nebraska contends that "... if Democratic senators had been chosed the admission of the territory into the Union would have been postponed till a more convenient political season."

SE Tech Board Nixes Pay Hikes

The governing board of the Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College Tuesday denied a request from Lincoln campus employes who had argued they were due pay raises larger than those granted for 1973-74.

The action is almost sure to prompt the Lincoln Education Association (LEA) to file a lawsuit to contest the decision.

The LEA had argued that the Lincoln campus employes should be granted the pay raises negotiated last spring when those employes were still officially working for the Lincoln School District.

Raises Granted

As the Lincoln Technical College, the Lincoln campus was governed then by the Lincoln Board of Education. Just before the Lincoln operation became one campus in the Southeast Community College system last July, the Lincoln School Board granted minimal raises to the group.

That Board said it had done so at the request of the new board.

The employes, however, have maintained they should be paid the higher salaries they said the LEA negotiated on their behalf.

The Southeast board attorney said Tuesday that he didn't see it that way, and a board task force which had helped study the issue said it agreed.

Attorney Doug Curry said those employes were not actually employed for 1973-74, since they had been notified last spring that uncertainties in state legislative action meant they could not be assured school district employment after June 30.

"There were no employes of the Lincoln Technical College in existence for 1973-74," Curry said. "They really didn't have jobs until June 26," when the Lincoln School Board reappointed them for the 1973-74 year but on salary schedules in effect for 1972-73.

"That is the contract we are obligated to pick up," he suggested.

Curry also said that he questioned whether any negotiated increases, approved according to provisions of the teacher negotiation act, could bind a technical community college.

"The act may not apply to our boards," he said.

And finally, he said for practical reasons he would urge denial of the request since the Southeast board has said it wants to move toward uniformity of fringe benefits and some comparative level of salaries for employes in Lincoln, Milford and Fairbury, homes for the three Southeast campuses.

"Lincoln is already higher," he said, and the additional raises would make the move toward comparability more difficult.

Donald Ferguson of Lincoln moved to approve the recommendation and Robert Wekesser, also a Lincoln board member, seconded the motion.

There were no dissenting votes.

The 1973-74 salary schedule would have granted raises of 5.5% as an average figure. The actual raises ranged from zero to 4%, the increases already built into the old schedule.

Big Lincoln Campus Urged To Tech Unit

A consultant who studied facility needs for the Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College told the board Tuesday it should put high priority on building a major campus in Lincoln.

Several board members immediately said they doubted they would favor such an approach.

The report was provided by Myron Blee, representing Associated Consultants in Education of Tallahassee, Fla.

Blee said he and two other consultants had concluded that Lincoln should be the site for a major central campus, or perhaps 100 acres, that would include a complex of buildings.

That would become the major project in a building program he estimated would cost $7 million.

He also suggested the Southeast board continue use of the Milford campus, with physical plant additions there only to enhance the campus' non-occupational instructional efforts.

At Fairbury, he said, the campus should continue its community-college type function, but no technical education programs should be located there.

Although the former junior college serves a high percentage of local college graduates, it is in an area of declining population, said Blee.

'Off-Center'

He also called it "off-center" in relation to the major population centers in the 15 southeastern Nebraska counties under the Southeast Community College board's jurisdiction.

Blee also said his firm had visited Peru State College and the former Pershing College in Beatrice and concluded neither was suitable as a permanent campus facility.

Both might be used, he said, if space in them could be available on a service-charge basis.

Close In, Large

He said that campus should be within easy reach of the large population center in Lancaster County and large enough to provide space for buildings, parking and attractive site development.

"None of the buildings in current use meets these criteria," he said. The college now leases space in several Lincoln School District buildings.

When several board members asked Blee if Lincoln really needed a major central facility, he said "there a number of ways it can be done."

He agreed that the board could opt for some central administrative location and spread its programs throughout the city in several sites.

Best Approach

But he said his firm had concluded the central location for both administration and programs was the best approach, with rented space serving particular populations in other locations around the city.

"The number of people served in Lincoln is very, very low," he said. "I believe that number will increase when the college does establish its own identity."

The college currently owns no facilities in Lincoln.

At Fairbury, said Blee, several old buildings should be abandoned. The newer buildings there can handle Fairbury's needs, he said, perhaps with some alternate use of part of the dormitories.

Dorm Space Uses

Later, the board asked Area President Robert Eicher to study possible use for space in the dorms, which are not fully utilized.

Predicted Dip Occurs In Business Activity

Last month Business in Nebraska noted that the overall Nebraska dollar-volume index increased by more than 10 percentage points from July to August but that a subsequent decline was probable.

Figures for August to September tabulated by the Bureau of Business Research at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln reveal that this drop, slightly more than 10 percentage points, did occur.

Just as the July-to-August rise was primarily due to increased agricultural prices and farm marketings, the August-to-September drop was due largely to declines in these indicators. The agricultural index rose from a (revised) level of 181.9 in July to 242.1 in August, then dropped to 192.4 in September. Although the agricultural indicators caused most of the drop, construction, distributive, manufacturing and government indicators also declined.

In spite of the August-to-September declines for a number of business indicators, most remained well above 1972 levels. The overall Nebraska dollar-volume index for Nebraska increased 15.1% from September, 1972, to September, 1973. The comparable increase for the nation was 13.6%.

Even after the sharp August-to-September declines, the agricultural index remains 40.9% above September, 1972, in Nebraska and 40.7% higher nationally. All this increase was the result of higher prices.

Currently the economic outlook appears quite uncertain both in Nebraska and in the nation, writes bureau statistician Dr. Vernon Renshaw. The declines in several economic indicators from August to September should not necessarily be taken to imply a general economic slowdown, since in most cases those declines followed abnormally large increases.

In his Review and Outlook column, Renshaw indicates, however, that he sees potential problems posed by the "energy crisis" which would make it difficult to sustain the kind of growth that occurred in the first half of 1973. In fact, many observers predict that 1974 will bring declines in economic activity.

Retail activity represents one indicator which could be important in determining the course of business activity. Total retail sales in Nebraska were 13.5% greater in September, 1973, than in September, 1972, and were higher in the non-metorpolitan areas.

Here is a summary of Nebraska's net taxable retail sales by regions (unadjusted for price changes).

HEALTH TIP

FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

Croup or laryngitis is usually a direct or indirect result of an upper respiratory virus infection.

The Nebraska Medical Association points out that croup is communicable through the duration of an acute illness. Symptoms include hoarseness and inflammation. In small children, the inflammation may cause swelling.

Since it is a disease that affects the larynx or voice box, voice rest is one of the most important things to help relieve symptoms. A moist atmosphere or steam, an abundant amount of liquids will also help relieve the symptoms caused by croup or laryngitis.

Hoarseness is a common effect of any type of disease in the larynx. In all cases of hoarseness that last longer than two weeks, the Nebraska Medical Association suggests you see your physician for a medical examination.

Cushing Gets ROTC Stipend

Rodney K. Cushing, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald E. Cushing of Nebraska City, has been awarded a three-year Army ROTC scholarship.

Cushing, a sophomore majoring in mathematics at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, is a member of the NU Rifle Club and the Jazz Band.

The scholarship, which was granted retroactive to last September, will pay for tuition, fees, and books. In addition, it will provide him with $100 per month subsistence during the school year.

Upon graduation, he will be commissioned a Second Lieutenant in the U.S. Army.

Creighton Classes Set At Boys Town

Omaha — Creighton University and Boys Town announced a joint educational program to be called Creighton West.

The announcement was made by the Rev. Joseph J. Labaj, S. J., Creighton president, and the Rev. Robert P. Hupp, Boys Town director.

Creighton West will be an evening continuing education program administered by the university and operated on the Boys Town campus. Classes for the spring semester will begin on Wednesday, Feb. 20.

Dr. Thomas Kuhlman, coordinator of continuing education at Creighton, will direct the 15-course program. Thirteen of the courses will run for five weeks and two for 10 weeks. All classes will be held on Wednesday evenings from 7:30 to 9 p.m. in the Boys Town high school building. All courses are non-credit.

"We believe there are many people who have finished their formal education, but wish to involve themselves in a formal class of personal enrichment and professional or business development. Others may not wish to involve themselves in formal requirements such as examinations, term papers and grades. Others do not want to committ themselves to the longer period of study required for degree credit," Father Labaj said.

The decision to take the classes to Boys Town was made with the energy crisis in mind. "Much of the thinking and the planning of this program centered around putting the classes in a location convenient to large numbers of people and with easy access to the interstate system," he said.

Father Labaj said Creighton West will expand in proportion to response and the possibility of bringing education to other centers throughout the metropolitan area is not ruled out. The university now operates advanced continuing education for teachers in Council Bluffs and Audubon, Ia.

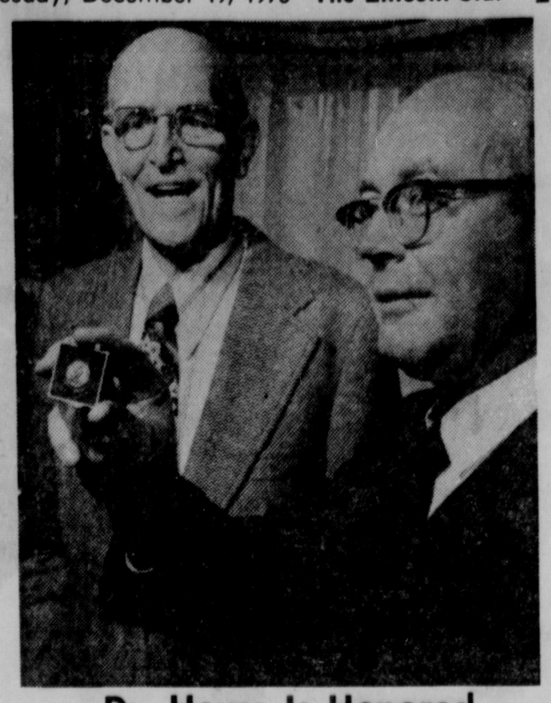

Eleven Flee Wood River Hotel Blaze

Wood River, Neb. (AP) — Eleven persons escaped injury when fire swept through a two-story residential hotel here early Tuesday.

Three occupants were rescued from the second story of the building. One of them, a 5-month-old boy, was dropped from the second floor onto a blanket held by firemen below.

No injuries were reported.

Dr. Howe Is Honored

Dr. Crosby Howe, (left), a member of the Nebraska Veternarian Association since 1930, was honored Tuesday with the presentation of a lifetime membership pin in the organization. The pin was presented by Dr. John Cerny, of Crete, a member of the board of directors of Area 2 in the association. The pin was awarded at Dr. Howe's Lincoln home. (Star Photo.)

Federal Reserve Bank Board Post To Dinsdale

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—Roy G. Dinsdale of Palmer, Neb., has been appointed a director of the Omaha Branch of the Federal Reserve Bank of Kansas City.

Dinsdale is board chairman of the Farmers National Bank in Central City, Farmers State Banks in Aurora and Lexington, First National Bank in Osceola, State Bank in Palmer, Bank of Papillion, National Bank of Neligh and Citizens National Bank of Torrington, Wyo. He is president of the First National Bank of Shelby and vice president of the First National Bank of Wisner.

Dinsdale succeeds S.N. Wolbach, president of the First National Bank of Grand Island. Wolbach served three terms on the board and was ineligible for reappointment.

Glenn Yaussi, vice chairman of the National Bank of Commerce in Lincoln, was reappointed to a two-year term on the board.

Eugene H. Adams, chairman of the First National Bancorporation of Denver, was named to a one-year term on the Federal Advisory Council, succeeding Morris F. Miller, chairman of the Omaha National Bank, who had served three terms and was ineligible for reappointment.

Omaha School Board Accepts Study Funds

Omaha (UPI) — The Omaha School Board unanimously consented to approve a $15,000 private stipend to pay for the services of a Lincoln consulting firm.

The money was donated by northern Natural Gas Co. President Willis Strauss of Omaha for expenses incurred by Selection Research Inc.

The consulting firm was hired by the board to coordinate the activities of the Omaha community committee which is seeking a suitable integration system for the district's public schools.

The U.S. Justice Dept. has contended that portions of the school system exhibited segregation.

The first expense item of the Lincoln firm, $4,472, was approved by the board Monday night.

Fred Bishop, cochairman of the citizens committee, said he hoped that Strauss' contribution signaled that the committee was "finally starting to get the public interest."

Newly appointed board member Mrs. Ruth Thomas officially assumed her position Monday night. She fills the vacancy created by the resignation of Joe Hart. Mrs. Thomas, 53, is a licensed mortician and the wife of an Omaha funeral director.

Lawmen And Firemen To Get 'Project Family' Holiday Subs

About 75 Jewish men and four Jewish women will be substituting for firemen, police officers and sheriff's deputies again this Christmas in "project family" sponsored by B'nai B'rith.

The aim of the project, now in its fifth year, is to allow regular officers and firemen to be home with their families over the Christmas holiday.

According to John Breslow, co-chairman of the project, Jewish men and women will be working from 2:30 p.m. the day before Christmas until 6:30 a.m. the day after Christmas taking the place of some men in each of the agencies.

The volunteers will be doing such tasks as working in the city jail, in radio communications, perhaps riding in cruisers and performing regular routine duties at fire stations.

"It's appreciated by all the officers," Inspector Robert Butcher of the Lincoln Police Department said.

Workers Fail To Report At Cooper Station

Brownville (AP) — Union workers did not report to their jobs at the Nebraska Public Power District's Cooper nuclear station near here Tuesday, an NPPD spokesman said.

"There was a misunderstanding between the mechanical contractor and the labor union," the NPPD spokesman said.

NPPD is now testing the nuclear facility.

"This will just put us one day behind," the spokesman said. "We believe the workers will be back on the job tomorrow — Wednesday."

The spokesman said he was not certain of the exact cause of the misunderstanding, but said he believed work would resume at the regular time Wednesday.

Rape Victim Recently Had Sex Changed

Omaha (AP) — A 22-year-old Omahan who recently was changed surgically from a man to a woman reported she was raped early Tuesday, police said.

According to detectives, the victim said she was forced into a car shortly after midnight and was driven to a park, where the attack took place.

She told officers the suspect, in his mid-20s with greasy hair, forced her into a small red car where he struck her several times and threatened her with a knife before driving to the park.

The victim's physician told police the victim underwent transexual surgery in Denver two months ago and is "legally and physically a woman."

Kohoutek Said Sign Of Christ's Second Coming

Washington (UPI) — Fundamentalist preacher Carl McIntire said the comet Kohoutek is a sign of the second coming of Christ.

Comparing it to the Star of Bethlehem that heralded the birth of Christ, McIntire said in a statement:

"This super spectacular now commanding the world's attention is no mystery to the Bible-believing Christian. He is expecting just such an event. He accepts the Lord's own promise that immediately before his return, 'There shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars (Luke 21:25), 'Great signs shall there be from heaven,' (Luke 21:11)."

A Gift of Food

Carol Scroggins
Director of Consumer Affairs

Giving is one of the joys of Christmas. Here are a few gift suggestions for those who love good food and cooking.

Select all the necessary ingredients for a favorite yuletide punch and combine them with the recipe and a pretty punch bowl for your favorite hostess.

Choose a variety of small containers of special teas or make your own special spice tea blend to go along with that pretty teapot.

Make your own jams and jellies, put them in interesting containers, and fill a basket or gift box of a variety of flavors or colors—red cherry jelly and green mint, orange marmalade and grape jam.

Fill a basket with a variety of canned gourmet foods—antipasto, fancy soups, smoked oysters, or other tidbits—for a friend with a taste for the unusual.

Assemble a snack pack of cheeses, crackers and meats on a fancy tray or cutting board to open immediately and enjoy.

Give one of our gift certificates which can be used for those last minute holiday treats to pep up after-the-holidays menus.

Use one of the pretty new Fleming coffee cans to hold an assortment of your homemade candies or cookies. These cans, in gay solid colors, are festive enough to require no wrapping. Just fill the can, seal with the plastic lid, and add a pretty bow.

We invite your comments, questions and inquiries. Send them to

POSTCARD

by Stan Delaplane

Each morning, the visiting winter guests ride by my picture window. They are quite a picture.

They ride horses, an unpredictable beast with a frightening mouth and four legs — any one of which can kick you from thisaway to thataway. And will, too, if he gets a chance.

☆ ☆ ☆

There is some talk among sentimentalists that horses are man's best friend. When I was knee-high to a pony, I felt the same way myself. At that time Mr. William S. Hart of the silent movies was my dream of what every boy should be.

Mr. Hart was constantly kissing his horse goodbye. We wept like anything at the Saturday matinees when he kissed his horse.

Fortunately in those golden days, there were plenty of horses.

This is the problem with sawing off such nonsense on the young. It gives them an absurd value of the anima;l kingdom.

Later as I grew up, at times I had to ride a horse.

And if you ask me, anybody who pays $5 an hour for this privilege is as daffy as they come. I would gladly pay $10 an hour just not to ride a horse. It is the poorest invention for travel I have ever run across.

A horse starts out by sizing you up. When he sizes me up, he gives an enormous horse laugh. He nearly splits a girth. I am not that comical. In fact, I am a sober individual.

☆ ☆ ☆

It is something like having an old Model-T Ford with a door only on one side. Once I asked a man out here why this was.

"The hosses is trained thataway," he said. (I think he was laying it on. You get a Westerner who works around horses, right away he is talking like a TV Western and snowing the public with superior knowledge.)

"Why don't you train them the other way?"

"They don't like it," he said.

Right away I could see there was a lot wrong with horses. If I am going to get aboard anything at $5 an hour, I would like my pick of which side I get on.

"If you tried to git on this hoss on the other side, he's th'ow you," said the wrangler.

Well, I don't want any horse or anybody else to th'ow me. I will th'ow anybody who is smaller than I am. But this hoss outweighed me. Also he had a look in his eye as though he had not had his morning coffee yet.

☆ ☆ ☆

Still it is very fashionable. So I got aboard this hoss. On the correct side.

The hoss then threw his head in the air.

"Frisky," said the wrangler.

"Do you think he's been drinking?" I said. "I don't mind driving but I like my co-pilot sober too."

With that we set off across the desert. And of all the rides! These hosses have no shock absorbers. Whenever I went down, this contrary animal came up. He had power steering but he must have been using a poor mixture of oats. He just ambled along.

It could not compare with a modern car. And there is only room for one passenger.

By the time I got back to the stable, I was as disgusted as the horse.

Didn't kiss him goodbye either. I know what I felt like doing. But I was afraid he'd kick back.

ACTION LINE

DIAL 477-2121

Or Write P.O. Box 81689, Lincoln, NE 68501

It was my understanding that it's illegal to buy alcohol on credit in the state of Nebraska. If this is true, how can clubs send members a bill at the end of the month for the food and drinks they have consumed?

—A.J.K, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The law prohibits a person from purchasing liquor on credit at retail liquor stores according to Georgia Kuebler of the Nebraska Liquor Control Commision.

Mrs. Kuebler said there are two exceptions to this overall law.

Clubs can allow members or their guests to charge drinks to the accounts of such members or guests, if this is provided for in the bylaws of the club.

Another exception is in hotels or restaurants. The patron can place dinner drinks on the tab, and pay for them as he leaves, or he can pay for this with a charge card acceptable to the establishment.

However this only applies to drinks consumed during the course of a meal, and doesn't allow a person to sit throughout the evening and drink on credit.

I enjoyed the Menuhin concert very much, and would like to know if the Nebraska Educational Television Network (NETV) plans to rebroadcast it. I've heard that the program was televised live, and placed on video tape.

—Music Lover, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The program will not only be rebroadcast locally, but there's a good chance it will appear nationally on the Public Broadcasting System (PBS).

Ron Hull, assistant manager for NETV, said he's contacted PBS about the broadcast and he would be surprised if the system decided not to do the show.

Hull said no specific date has been set, but he noted there's a lot of editing and reframing that needs to be done before it could be released nationally.

He said that no matter what the PBS decides, the program will definitely be shown again for Nebraskans.

Our luggage was damaged during a tour in the South Pacific on Air France. It was insured, and all the subsequent questionnaires have been filled out but we still haven't received a settlement even though the tour was last February. Can ACTION LINE find out what's going on?

—Mrs. W.M., Archer

ACTION LINE: Apparently there's been a breakdown of communications because a spokesman for the Union de Transports Aeriens' Los Angeles office said a check for the settlement was mailed from the Air France New York office last August.

Dominique Festoc said she would check with that office and see if a cancelled check had been returned. If not she will cancel the order on that check and send another one.

Either way she will be in touch with you within the week to straighten the matter out.

ACTION LINE UPDATE: The answer to the question about how Pioneers Park got its name (ACTION LINE Dec. 12) has been confirmed by Mrs. Martha M. Rebensdorf, an administrative assistant for the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce.

Mrs. Rebensdorf said she's kept an extensive file of newspaper clippings and other items that she felt would be of interest some day. One of the items on file is a story about how the park got its name.

The park land was donated to the city in 1929 by the late John F. Harris, who requested that it be named Pioneers Park in honor of his parents and other pioneers who were the foundation of all the early west, as well as Lincoln.

I recently saw a bumper-sticker on a car that said "I Brake For Animals." Can ACTION LINE tell me how to obtain one of these?

—Pet Owner, Beatrice

They are bright orange with black lettering, and can be used to discourage tailgaters at the same time they help to reduce animal fatalities on the highways, according to a spokesman for the group.

The bumper stickers can be obtained by writing Friends of Animals, 11 W. 60th St., N.Y. 10023.

I ordered two pairs of shoes from Lane Bryant early in the fall. Two pairs arrived, but they were the wrong size. I sent these shoes back, but have heard nothing from the firm. Can ACTION LINE either find out what happened to the shoes, or get a refund for me?

—Mrs. M.R., Ogallala

ACTION LINE: The company has been contacted about your plight, and is running a computer check on your order.

Mrs. Linda Jeffries, with the firm's customer service department, will be getting in touch with you in the next day or two.

She told ACTION LINE that she would tell you whether the shoes, or a refund had been mailed out, and that she would explain the details to you at that time.

Who Is Santa?

By LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writer

Who is that man called Santa Claus?

Is he really a person who lives at the North Pole? Who spends all year making presents for good little girls and boys? Who wears a red velvet suit trimmed with fur to match his snow white beard? And who comes down the chimney each Christmas Eve to leave gifts under the tree?

Or is he the spirit of Christmas, a loving, giving spirit?

This is the time of the year when parents ask themselves whether it is wise to let their children believe in Santa Claus.

They wonder if talking about an imaginary gift-giver will foster unrealistic ideas in children. They fear that when a youngster learns the truth, he will become disillusioned and distrustful.

But it all depends in the manner in which the parents discuss the Santa Claus figure with their youngsters, according to Dr. Nancyann H. Norbert, child clinician at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Department of Psychology.

"There's no harm in allowing children to believe in imaginary, mythical beings as long as they're not lied to," she said.

But she warned against parents telling their children that there definitely is a Santa Claus. Then, when they discover that there isn't, they also learn that their parents have lied to them.

As possible solutions to seemingly innocent questions about the legendary gift-giver, the psychologist recommended that, when parents are asked about the true existence of Santa Claus, they "say that Santa Claus is the spirit but there may not be a real live person who is a Santa Claus.

"If you go into the store and the child asks, 'Is that Santa Claus, Mommy?' it is wise to say that it is a man dressed up like him."

Saying "Santa Claus is coming" to a child is acceptable to Dr. Norbert because "Santa Claus does come . . . that giving of love and gifts comes."

However, if the child wants to believe there is a real live Santa Claus, that is acceptable, too.

"The thing is the parents have never said there (definitely) is," she said, indicating that that leaves the door open for the possibility that the true person does not exist and the child is better prepared for his eventual discovery.

When approached in such a fashion, the parental dilemma of whether, and at what age, to inform their children of the nonexistence of Santa Claus "The Man" never presents itself, Dr. Norbert pointed out.

"We all believe in the spirit (of Santa Claus)," the child psychologist said. "You want children to believe in the spirit . . . in the loving, giving spirit."

And then "you have a lot more adults who believe in the spirit of Christmas," Dr. Norbert said.

High Quality Nuts May Be Smaller

Clean, unbroken shells tell you nuts are high quality. If you see the shield, "U. S. Grade Extra Fancy," it means that the mixed nuts are of highest quality in extra large sizes. The "U. S. Fancy" grade shield may be used on nuts of highest quality, but you will find that the size of Brazil nuts, pecans and walnuts may be smaller.

Art Education Is Essential

Today's Write On column was submitted by Mrs. Shirley Pribek, who formerly taught art in Phoenix, Ariz.

She, her husband and three children have lived in Lincoln for the past year.

This is the "Year of the Arts" in Lincoln Public schools. As an ex-art teacher I feel it the proper time to state my case everywhere I can. I hear much concern from parents about their desire for a full art education program through all grades in our elementary schools. I feel our problem is simply that since we don't have a full program we can't define exactly what it is that we want. I'd like to do just that.

Elementary art education should be a continuing progress through creative artistic expression of the development of the whole child . . . of all children. I do not mean art lessons for gifted children or mastery of skills in any particular art or craft.

All children are natural artists. Self-expression is a basic need. Although there are many ways for a child to exercise his creativity, art is an obvious, visual and natural means.

Through self-expression a child grows in his understanding and awareness of himself and his world, and develops his sense of identity, aesthetic awareness and self confidence. Without opportunity for self-expression a child runs the risk of becoming a "canned" product of what he may consider a "plastic" world. There is so much information to be learned today that we tend to minimize the time spent on developing the person. We often think of the Arts as "frills," when they are truly the base of our culture.

Creativity is a mental and physical process. It is observing, sensing, experiencing, imagining, analyzing, recording, noticing and communicating. Artistic activity is a useful medium for this process. There are definite, recognizable stages in creative growth throughout childhood. The mental growth and skills acquired through art education can be applied to all other areas of learning. Artistic creativity is so personal, unique and complicated that a child's desire and ability to express himself can easily be squelched. This can happen at any of the crucial stages in his creative growth which occur especially during the elementary years.

Therefore, a well-trained, understanding art educator can be essential to his continuing development. For this reason, I favor the use of a coordinated staff of art education specialists, teaching directly in each classroom on a regular once or twice weekly basis in our elementary schools.

These art educators can be of tremendous service to the school's entire staff, curriculum and student body in many additional ways . . . such as coordinating some art experiences with regular classroom curriculum, inspiring and aiding in displays, exhibits and the general look of the place, supplying methods and ideas to teachers when asked and helping school and the community to understand the children and their learning through their art.

Such a program makes the school shine with enthusiasm as children are more perceptive, imaginative, confident and able to communicate and illustrate their learning. Children, through art education on a regular basis, are skilled in the use of many practical media and have better work habits. The products of child art provide a visual public relations between school and community.

I say "art educator" rather than art "teacher" because they are not the same. An artist is not always a good teacher and if he is, he is not necessarily an "educator." A regular teacher is not always a good art teacher and does not always have time to be if he is.

Art education does not come about by simply providing art activities. In fact, art activities presented poorly can actually damage a child's creative development. The art activity is a tool and must be used properly if it is to aid in art education.

An educator is concerned with the total growth of the whole child and not just with the mastery of skills. An educator is concerned with the discovery of principles by the child himself, through his own activity, where an art teacher may try to teach those principles "at" the child. Art principles are useful tools in artistic expression but they are not the true aims of art education. Art education is progressive creative growth through actual art experience.

For such an important program, careful hiring is necessary. The art educator is both an artist and an educator, but more important, a specialist in the specific field of art education in the elementary school. The field is known as "The New Art Education."

We need special art educators who understand the development of creativity in young children and know how to encourage its growth. This all costs money . . . for salaries and good materials, but teachers can be shared by smaller schools and Lincoln is affluent enough to expect such a program. The rewards are priceless.

For more understanding about child art and creativity there are many books in the field and successful school programs to observe. For example; Victor Lowenfeld's: Creative Mental Growth MacMillan, 1965. And the Owattonna Art Education Project: 10 vol. Minneapolis, U of Minn. Press Publ. in several different years.

Checklist Issued

Washington (AP) — The Consumer Product Safety Commission issued an eight-point safety checklist Tuesday for the millions of owners of space heaters, which are becoming more popular because of the energy shortage.

The commission estimated that more than 5,000 persons were treated in hospital emergency rooms last year for burns and other injuries associated with gas, kerosene, oil and electric space heaters.

In addition, the agency said as many as 700,000 of the 12 million fuel oil space heaters in use are believed to be improperly vented and could emit deadly carbon monoxide.

To prevent injuries, the commission recommended that:

—Space heaters be serviced annually and be installed and repaired by professional servicemen.

—Heaters be located away from furniture, draperies and other combustible materials.

—Children and adults be alerted to the high surface temperatures of heaters and the danger of clothing being set afire.

—Electric heaters have a thermostat control and an automatic shut-off device if tipped over.

—Children be warned not to insert fingers or objects through the heater's guard screen.

—The use of extension cords be avoided but, if necessary, heavy duty cords be used.

—Special caution be exerted when using electric heaters in the bathroom, where they could cause a severe electric shock if they came into contact with water, accumulated moisture or plumbing fixtures.

The commission invited consumers to use its toll-free telephone hot line, 800-638-2666, to report serious product defects or product related injuries.

Major Issues Concern Women

By GAY PAULEY

New York (UPI) — The energy crisis and the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) emerge as the paramount concerns of women in the year ahead. Add to that concern over Watergate, which surfaces in almost every conversation with leaders of women's organizations.

On the energy crisis, the consensus is unamimous — it's here and we must all act to deal with it.

"If you ask me what I consider our major issues in '74 and beyond, I'd list the energy crisis and passage of ERA (Equal Rights Amendment)," said Mrs. Kermit Haugan, president of The General Federation of Women's Clubs. The Federation, in its 83rd year, represents between 4 and 5 million U.S. women and, all told, about 11 million around the world.

"What we have to watch," said Mrs. Lucy Wilson Benson, "is that a proposed new gasoline tax and rationing of fuels don't hit the poor hardest."

Mrs. Benson is president of The League Of Women Voters, a 53-year-old organization with some 160,000 members.

On the other issue refered to simply as ERA, the feminine battle lines are drawn sharply.

Powerful segments of women's groups have garnered their memberships to get ERA ratified by the necessary eight more states that would add the 27th amendment to the U.S. Constitution. Thirty-eight (three-fourths of the states) is the magic number.

Some groups want to have ratification by all 50 states at least by 1975. But the going will be tough.

There are forces opposing the amendment on assorted grounds from its making women eligible for the draft to job equality when there are some jobs women are not physically able to do — the traditionally masculine roles such as, say, construction worker.

Restated, the amendment provides "equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex."

States have until 1979 to act on the amendment, but those campaigning for it say that 1974 is, as Mrs. Haugan puts it, "the time to strike while the iron is hot."

"We must keep the momentum," said Mrs. Benson.

Mrs. Haugan said in an interview that although ERA is a battlefront in the United States, equal rights for women everywhere need attention and action.

"This is the time of emerging women around the world," she said.

"I've traveled thousands of miles abroad as well as at home for the Federation, talking with women's groups. In many parts of the world, the woman still is the second-class citizen . . . still the beast of burden in many lands."

The strongest opposition to ERA comes from two very vocal groups. One is called "Stop ERA." Phyllis Schlafly, an Alton, Ill., housewife and an articulate speaker, travels constantly, talking to almost any organization that will listen, being interviewed by newspapers, television and radio.

Mrs. Henry Middendorf, also of Alton and national vice president, said "Stop ERA" now has groups in 25 states "and members are a cross-section of all ages and economic levels, married and single."

One of their goals in '74, she said, is to get state legislatures which already have approved the amendment now to offer resolutions to rescind the action."

Another activist group opposing ERA is Happiness Of Womanhood Inc. (HOW), whose president is Mrs. Jaquie Davison, a San Diego, Calif., housewife.

"We're for equal rights and equal pay for equal work," Mrs. Davison said. "but let's face it: There are some jobs for which women are not physically able."

Mrs. Davison has testified before several state legislatures, speaking against the amendment or, as she says, "planting seeds."

HOW also wants a return to dignity of the term "housewife . . . because the feminist movement has dragged the word through the mud and even tried to have it taken out of the dictionary."

But Mrs. Davison echoed the feeling of all with whom UPI talked —" as for our energy crisis, everyone has to do the best he can to save. It is not something out there, but a crisis right at our doorstep.

"It may be a good experience in a way . . . we'll learn to appreciate things more. I think we should all resolve to cut at least 15% of our energy use. Cut the amount of driving. My daughter just moaned as I mentioned that to you on the phone."

Mrs. Davison added with a laugh, "We may just give up our heated swimming pool."

In talks with various women leaders, the other issues that cropped up were not necessarily goals only for '74, but for the years beyond.

They included changes in our way of financing political campaigns, an all-out war on poverty, solutions for problems of the aged, improved housing, discrimination against women and the minorities, civil rights, widening the opportunities for women in the religious community, population control, improved education, child care, health, women in labor unions, divorce and family relations and the whole feminine image.

Watergate came up in talks with several organization presidents. "If Watergate teaches us nothing else, it shows us that values taught are not viable, not desirable," said Mrs. Wilma Scott Heide, president of The National Organization for Women, Inc. (NOW). "We are the product of the affluent white male mystique."

The new year promises a surge in groups making women more active in politics, whether at local, state or national level. And, consider that '74 will be an election year.

The president of Church Women United, Mrs. Clarie Collins Harvey, of Jackson, Miss., said one Washington meeting in '73 was just that — to get women more politically active.

"Put to work on some of the changes needed when you get home," she said, "or go into politics itself. Run for office."

Most organization presidents interviewed felt some drastic changes were needed in the method of funding political campaigns. The gist of it all: Public funding encouraged, rather than a candidate's dependence on a few big contributors.

Both The League Of Women Voters and The General Federation Of Women's Clubs, for instance, feel broader participation in political campaign contributions is a myst.

As Mrs. Haugan of the Federation put it, "as long as a candidate is dependent on big contributions, the whole matter permeates the system at all levels. I guess if I'd given $100,000 I'd like something in return."

Don't 'Fight Fire With Fire'

DEAR ABBY: The advice you gave "Letterless," that poor wife whose husband is away in the service and hardly ever writes to her, was nothing less than cruel. I am old enough to be her mother, and I would have told her to get rid of the bum!

When she begs him to write because she's worried, his response is: "If I die, the service will inform you." Abby, his cruelty is surpassed only by yours. He's not her teenaged son, he's her husband, and the father of her children. She has every right to worry about him, and demand that he write. And you tell her to write him "cheerful, newsy, entertaining letters." Why should she? She's at home being both mother and father to their children, and has far less time to write than he has. Abby, I do believe your compassion and brains are in your rear end! DISAPPOINTED IN BUFFALO

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: Sorry, but I still think I'm right. Your "fight-fire-with-fire" philosophy would be a sure way to consign marriage to a heap of ashes.

DEAR ABBY: I play cards with a woman who is always bragging about her children. Several times lately she has said that her 21-year-old daughter, who is a junior at the University of Iowa, is the only virgin in her sorority. I think this is a terrible reflection on the rest of the girls in the sorority.

I am just dying to put this woman in her place. If she says it again, what should I say?

ANOTHER MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Ask her how she can be sure.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif., 90212 for Abby's booklet, /"How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

The bidding:

3♠	Pass	4♥	Pass

Opening lead - ten of diamonds.

Bridge is a game of percentages. The player who makes the best bid every time he calls must be reckoned a good bidder, even though the best bid does not always produce the best result.

In the same way, the player who makes the best play every time also winds up with the chips because, over the long haul, the percentages will work in his favor.

Of course, the best percentage bid or play is frequently only a matter of judgment, and the player who thinks he is making the right bid or play may, despite his good intentions, commit an error of judgment that runs counter to the percentages.

It may be argued that South made the wrong percentage bid in undertaking a slam after North had merely expressed a preference for hearts as against spades, but South had no way of determining whether partner had the queen of hearts, which was all he needed for a slam.

The sight of an entryless dummy made it clear to South that he had misgauged the situation and arrived at a poor slam. But this did not stop him from making the hand. He won the diamond lead and returned the king of trumps. When it developed that East had the singleton queen, declarer was home.

The king play was eminently correct. South had no chance for the slam if the trumps were divided 2-2 or 4-0, since he would lose two trump tricks in either case, whichever heart he chose to lead.

His only real chance was to find the trumps divided 3-1, with the singleton the queen. The king play was right for the best of all reasons — that it could theoretically make the contract, but could not be the cause of losing it.

$1 Million IBM System Is Ordered By Ed Board

By MILAN WALL
Star Staff Writer

The Lincoln Board of Education gingerly took the first step Tuesday toward acquisition of a $1 million computer system that would provide classroom teachers with objective test scores within two minutes.

"We want to place the order now" for the first piece of data processing equipment, Supt. John Prasch told the board. "We can review it again in February in case we want to back out," he said. "We might set that as the point of no return."

Although the board approved that recommendation without dissent, it was a bit nervous about the recommendation to buy IBM equipment without taking bids from other firms.

Switch Said Costly

But Robert Den Hartog, associate superintendent for business affairs, said discussions with other supplies had convinced him that switching to another firm wouldn't be worth what it would cost to make the programming changes such a move would demand.

"There are some advantages to IBM," said Den Hartog. "There's also 14% to 22% more cost for IBM.

"It's a difficult question," he admitted.

Den Hartog said some of the associated equipment would be bought on a bid basis, but he said the school district decision to buy IBM equipment several years ago virtually sealed what it could do as it moves to third-generation computers.

Although the new equipment would be working for teachers in the classroom within two years, the $1 million cost would be spread over six years.

$914,000 To Buy

Den Hartog estimated the purchase cost at $914,000, said he anticipated another $80,926 in interest and $159,900 in maintenance by Aug. 31, 1980.

That would total $1,154,896, compared with a rental cost of $200,000 more, Den Hartog said he estimated.

He said he expected the new equipment could be handled with the same number of employes.

The main advantages from the new system, he said, would be those associated with classroom instruction.

Computerized test scoring, with the two-minute feedback to buildings, would begin in the second year, he said.

Variety Of Chores

The new system would also handle financial data, student census and enrollment information, letter writing and other administrative chores.

"We do have a tremendous problem handling data," said Ronald Brandt, associate superintendent for instruction. "We've got to find some tools, not just add more people all the time.

"Data processing is the answer."

Den Hartog said the order would be for a central computer to be delivered next June. Yet to be decided is the rental or purchase question.

In other matters, the board at a brief meeting authorized purchase of six parcels of land west of Lincoln High School at a total cost of $76,900.

Eventually acquisition of two other parcels would permit expansion of athletic fields and replacement of the old LHS Oval with a new track.

Most of the parcels run along 21st Street.

Supt. Prasch also told the board some elementary schools might have to delay opening time if daylight saving time is instituted in Nebraska Jan. 6.

McCook Suicide Ruling Confirmed

. . . In State Patrol Report

By United Press International

A State Patrol investigation into a "very unusual case" involving the death of an elderly McCook woman has confirmed the finding of the McCook police department that the death was a suicide.

The body of Miss Ida G. Fitzgibbons, 80, was found by McCook firemen during a fire at her home April 25. A plastic clothesline rope 3/16 inches in diameter was wrapped around her neck and a small kitchen knife was lodged in her chest.

An investigation by the McCook Police Chief Bill Green and his department showed that the death was an apparent suicide. However, after the September slayings of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Hoyt of rural Culbertson, fear gripped many residents of McCook who believed there was a "maniac" on the loose.

The Red Willow County board of supervisors, prompted by community pressure, then asked County Atty. Clyde Sarrett to request the State Patrol reinvestigate the case. Gov. J. J. Exon complied with Sarrett's request.

'Thoroughly Investigated'

In a report sent to Sarrett, Capt. V. W. Byler of the patrol's criminal division said the "very unusual case was conscientiously and thoroughly investigated" by Green and his department.

"Based on present evidence and additional investigation by the Nebraska State Patrol," Byler said, "the opinion of the McCook police department as to suicide is warranted.

"After an exhaustive investigation by the State Patrol," he added, "no evidence has been developed which would disagree with these findings."

Byler said "no pertinent additional" information had been uncovered through the patrol's probe but that "some points have been more fully clarified."

Said Despondent

Investigative reports showed that Miss Fitzgibbons had been despondent before her death. She apparently tried to hang herself (the end of the rope was found at the front of the body) and when this failed, she went to the kitchen, procured a knife and plunged it into her chest.

Reports showed that she could have started the fire in her electric stove immediately before killing herself" to remove the problem of disposal of the house."

Miss Fitzgibbons was preparing to move in with an ill sister in North Platte, Mrs. Florence Hardin.

Reports showed that Miss Fitzgibbons had sold her house, but that the deal hadn't been fully closed, and she had been told that she didn't get enough money for it.

In addition, she had expressed fear that the house would be vandalized, had cashed bonds and drawn up her only will the day before she died.

Brother, Sister Died

The Fitzgibbons family moved to Hayes County from Illinois when their children were very young and were farmers before retiring to McCook at least 10 years ago. Miss Fitzgibbons cared for her brother and a sister in her home before the brother died in 1971 and her sister died in January of this year.

The reports indicated that her despondency may have begun with the deaths of her brother and sister.

One of Miss Fitzgibbons legs was found broken after the fire, and the reports showed it could have been caused either when a fireman stepped on it in the dense smoke or when a nearby colonade fell through the floor.

There were no signs of a struggle, the reports showed, all doors and windows were locked, there was no evidence of an intruder and the woman's purse was left untouched.

Her hair was described as "neatly done" and her glasses were in place on her forehead.

Byler said the patrol would continue to investigate any additional information concerning the case that "may come to our attention."

Exon told UPI earlier this week that he was "fully satisfied" with the patrol's report and commended the patrol and McCook authorities for the investigations.

Public Hearing Planned On Widening Of Hwy. 2

A public hearing on alternate intersection designs for the proposed widening of Highway 2 has been scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Jan. 15 at Pound Junior High School Auditorium, 45th and LaSalle.

The proposed $6.3 million project to widen Hwy. 2 to four lanes would begin near the intersection of Pioneers Blvd. and Hwy. 2 and extend east to about one-half mile past the intersection of Old Cheney Rd. and Hwy 2.

There are 21 options on the locations of access streets, according to Department of Roads public hearing officer Jack Rosecrans. Final locations will be determined after the hearing.

Going to move soon? Be sure to notify the Circulation Department, giving both your old and new address.

State Licensing Of Ambulances, Staffs Is Sought

The State Health Department has drafted an emergency medical service act which calls for state licensing of all ambulances and certification of all drivers and attendants.

The 20-page draft, prepared for submission to the 1974 Legislature, outlines standards and procedures for ambulance licensure and training necessary for certification of personnel.

The State Health Board Monday unanimously endorsed the proposed legislation.

Recruiters Set Grand Opening

Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force recruiters in Lincoln will host grand opening ceremonies Dec. 28 for their new recruiting stations at 115 S. 66th.

Chuck Howard, Army recruiting station commander, said, "the public is welcome to drop in for refreshments during our grand opening on Friday (the 28th) or at any other time."

Fullerton Vote Leaves School Bond Undecided

Lincoln Star Special

Fullerton — A $1,120,000 bond issue for an addition to the Fullerton High School and remodeling of several classrooms was left undecided Tuesday when voters cast 322 ballots against and 321 for the issue.

Nance County Clerk Marvin McAfee said 31 absentee and disabled ballots remain yet to be counted, with the final tally expected at 1 p.m. Thursday.

The addition would provide more space for vocational, agriculture, home economics and music departments and a gym-auditorium that would seat 1,200. McAfee said the remodeling would also join two buildings, combining them for kindergarten through grade 12.

If approved, construction would start in the spring with completion expected in September 1975.

Furniture Stolen

Mining In Ruhr Reviewed

Essen Germany (AP) — The energy crisis could bring new life to the closed coal mines of the Ruhr, says West Germany's research minister, Horst Ehmke.

The government in Bonn is studying the possibility of substituting coal for oil in generating electric power. It also is looking into plans to speed up the building of 10 new coal-fired power stations.

What is in prospect is a turnabout of West Germany's long-term plan which had called for a sharp cutback in the use of coal as one of the sources of energy.

The Essen Institute for Mining Research is re-examining old studies on turning coal into gasoline, heating oil and substitute natural gas.

Western Europe's biggest oil user, whose normal daily consumption totals about 2.67 million barrels, has vast underground reserves of coal.

But a cost-cutting program has closed 110 mines over the past 15 years, with another 14 of the remaining 39 mines due to shut down by 1978 unless the government changes its mind.

Annual output sank from 140 million metric tons in 1960 to a targeted 97 million tons for 1973, and a government energy plan presented only two months ago called for a further cut to 83 million tons by 1978.

Demonstrating widespread new interest in coal, Prof. Fritz Burgbacher, the opposition Christian Democratic party's chief energy spokesman, wants output to rise to an annual 122 million tons, a level he figures would make up for the energy shortfall caused by partial loss of Arab oil.

West Germany's presently workable coal reserves total 10 billion metric tons, sufficient for 120 years at the present exploitation rate. Another 200 billion tons are estimated to lie deeper underground.

Unlike U.S. coal, found close to the surface in broad, easily workable seams, Ruhr coal lies as deep as 6,000 feet and seam widths average only about five feet.

Even so, Prof. Werner Peters, head of the Essen Mining Research Institute's coal research division, believes that further rises in prices for crude oil could soon make the costly process of converting coal into gasoline economically feasible for West Europe's biggest oil user.

Even before that point is reached, he said in an interview, West Germany could free more of its precious crude oil supplies for refining into gasoline by producing heating oil from coal instead of crude oil.

Before World War II, Germany developed two processes known as coal hydration and gasoline synthesis.

The study found that gasoline synthesis would cost about 72 cents a gallon of gasoline against 58 cents a gallon for the slightly cheaper coal hydration process, using techniques basically unchanged since the war.

Both processes compared unfavorably with the 13 cents per gallon cost of refining crude oil at prices prevailing three years ago.

But the oil squeeze has doubled the cost of refining crude oil to 25 cents and Peters believes that modernizing the complicated hydration process could reduce its cost somewhat, further closing the price gap between gasoline produced from coal and crude oil.

'Breeder' Plant Suffers Delays

©The New York Times

By VICTOR K. McELHENY

New York — The nation's most costly energy-research project — aimed at developing a commercial version of the "breeder" nuclear power plant by the mid-1980's — is suffering delays and large cost overruns that have forced re-examination of the effort's pace and scope.

An advisory panel of the Atomic Energy Commission, headed by Dr. Hans Bethe, a Nobel Prize physicist at Cornell University, has strongly endorsed the basic objective of the breeder — which is to avoid wasting all but 2% of the potential fuel value of the world's uranium supply — but it has harshly criticized the recent U.S. steps toward this goal.

Development of breeders, which produce more nuclear fuel than they consume, has been considered vital to long-term solutions to the energy crises facing industrially advanced countries.

The Soviet Union, France and Britain built large-scale breeder reactors years ahead of the United States, which commissioned its first small-scale breeder in 1951 and continues to operate a versatile experimental model, commissioned in 1963, at the National Reactor Testing Station in Idaho.

Expensive

In a telephone interview Tuesday, Bethe said that efforts toward building practical breeder power plants would be "long, expensive, and still worthwhile," but that management of the U.S. program, which has "not been very imaginative," has given the entire concept of the breeder an undeserved "bad name."

Bethe's panel recommended to the AEC changes in design and emphasis for both major construction projects in the U.S. breeder program — a test reactor being built in the state of Washington, and a demonstration power plant to be built in Tennessee.

Cost overruns of hundreds of millions of dollars have already appeared for the Washington project, and are regarded as certain for the reactor in Tennessee. Experts such as Bethe attribute the overruns more to cumbersome management than to inflation.

The Bethe panel recommended to the AEC's chairman, Dr. Dixy Lee Ray, that the test reactor in Washington should be build "as a research tool, "with more flexibility for testing "advanced" breeder ruels for producing extra nuclear fuel at a faster rate — with a shorter "doubling time," as nuclear specialists call it.

'No Mistake'

The Washington reactor, said Bethe, is "being constructed so that no mistake would ever be made."

"That's the worst mistake you can make in research," he said.

"You will learn most when you make some mistake."

In contrast, Bethe said, the Tennessee project should be simplified and built in the commercially oriented fashion desired by the industrial contractors, which are the Westinghouse Electric Co., General Electric Co., and the Atomics International Division of Rockwell International Corp.

Fast Flux Test Facility

The Washington test reactor, now rising on a knoll in the middle of the AEC's vast Hanford Reservation on the Columbia River, is called the Fast Flux Test Facility.

In recent weeks, high AEC officials have been told that the facility will cost $400 million instead of $200 million as was forecast earlier this year and will be completed in late 1977 rather than in 1975.

Like the first breeder in 1951, the big plants in Europe and the planned Tennessee demonstration project, the Hanford reactor will immerse its stainless-steel-clad assemblies of mixed uranium and plutonium oxide fuel in a pool of molten sodium.

In the late 1960's, the United States followed the lead of other nations in choosing the liquid-metal breeder for its top-priority nuclear power project, after the "first generation" of electricity plants, which produce only tiny quanitities of additional nuclear fuel, had entered the commercial economy.

The reactor is being built by Westinghouse, which took over the Hanford project in 1970 from Battelle Northwest, an arm of the private research organization called the Battelle Memorial Institute, at the insistence of Dr. Milton Shaw, who was, until he resigned this year, the AEC's director of reactor research.

$87 Million Estimate

When the project was first defined in 1967, its cost was estimated at $87 million, and completion was scheduled for 1973. In 1970, the estimates changed to $100 million and a completion date of 1974. The estimates have been revised this year.

Unexpectedly high expenses for the liquid-metal breeder program, which now receives the lion's share of government funds for developing nuclear power, could upset federal budgets for energy research for years to come.

Because of this, there has been discussion within the AEC of drastically redesigning and hence delaying the Tennessee demonstration project.

Defense Bill OKd For $73.75 Billion

The total is $3.5 billion under President Nixon's military budget for the year.

The compromise measure, subject to final action first in the House and then the Senate, retained the Senate-voted ban on military shipments of petroleum products to Southeast Asia for use by foreign forces.

In sponsoring the amendment, Sen. Norris Cotton, R-N.H., estimated that such shipments now average 22,000 barrels a day to South Vietnam and 1,550 barrels daily to Cambodia while Americans face a winter fuel shortage.

The conferees agreed to restore two weapons systems the House had voted to scrap. The Pentagon was allowed $110 million for development of an anti-ballistic missile site defense system for the protection of Minuteman missiles. In addition, $8.3 million was earmarked for developing the Navy's Sanguine system for communication with submarines.

The compromise bill allows $900 million for military assistance to South Vietnam, compared with $1.1 billion requested by President Nixon and $650 million voted by the Senate.

Senate conferees accepted the House's addition of funds to purchase 12 F111 aircraft to keep production lines in operation and the House agreed to 24 A70 aircraft to modernize the Air National Guard.

The House committee members also agreed to funding for the airborne warning and control system and for the advanced airborne command post.

Senate Increases Ceiling On U.S. Flood Insurance

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate passed a bill Tuesday sharply increasing the amounts of federal flood insurance that may be purchased by potential flood victims.

Sen. Harrison A. Williams, Jr., D-N.J., chief sponsor of the bill, said the present act, passed in 1968, was not working well because not enough insurance was available and many persons needing the protection were not covered.

The bill contains far-reaching provisions which would permit the Housing and Urban Development Department and other federal agencies to define flood-prone areas starting in 1975.

Persons in such areas would not be able to get subsidized flood insurance unless they adopted protective measures required by their location. They also would be ineligible for loans from federally assisted institutions unless they took such measures.

Single family homes — $17,500 to $35,000.

Other residential properities — $30,000 to $100,000.

Non-residential properties — $30,000 to $100,000.

The bill, passed by voice vote, was sent to conference with the House, which passed it in September.

1,000 Laid Off By Goodyear

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. has laid off about 1,000 workers at one plant here for a week, saying it would re-evaluate carmakers' needs next week.

A Goodyear spokesman said the workers at its Plant No. 2 in Akron would have five six-hour days this week instead of the normal six-day week. Six-hour days have been normal since World War II.

The spokesman said the cutback had been made because automakers' production was off and the need for tires was down.

Suit Is Filed By Peckinpah

LOS ANGELES (AP) — His reputation was damaged by changes Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer made in "Pat Garrett and Billy the Kid," director Sam Peckinpah alleges in a $1.5 million damage suit.

Filed in Superior Court Monday, the suit says MGM used his name in advertising the film. It falsely indicates the film was his version, Peckinpah says.

2. The contribution rate for the year 1974 of any other employer who meets the requirements for a reduced rate as set out in said Section 48-649 (1) shall be set out in the following table:

Experience Account Reserve Ratio	Contribution Rate
5.0 per cent to but not including 5.5 per cent	2.5 per cent
5.5 per cent to but not including 6.0 per cent	2.0 per cent
6.0 per cent to but not including 6.5 per cent	1.5 per cent

3. As used in this rule, the term "reserve ratio" is the ratio of the balance in the employer's experience account at the beginning of the year 1974 to the average of the annual payroll by which contributions were measured for the years 1970, 1971, 1972 and 1973. Provided that for an employer with less than four years of contribution experience, the average payroll will be determined on the basis of the years for which contributions were payable.

American citizens contribute $19.6 billion to charity annually

It's a fact. But not likely to be a headline. Violence and scandal are the staples of news; individual charity and kindness go unremarked. This is not to make any Pollyannish assumption that violence does not exist in harrowing abundance. In perspective we must see that violence is in all of us. So is God. The time is now to try His way, in concert, on a scale never before attempted. Get together with your family, friends, neighbors, or co-workers to discuss the problems of violence and how you can work together to help solve them. Cambridge Team's House To Be Run Solely By Weather And Waste

CAMBRIDGE, England (AP) — A Cambridge University research team plans to build a house next year that will be run solely by the sun, the wind, the rain and the waste of its occupants.

The team believes the world faces huge new energy shortages. So they hope to create a house for the future that can exist by itself, generating its own sources of power from nature alone. The house — they hope — will be entirely independent of outside systems of electricity, gas, oil, water and sewage.

"We are not trying to create a house for a drop-out society or for ecology freaks but one that will allow us to maintain our present standards of living with no more sacrifices than we will have to make when we run into future energy crises in 20 to 30 years," says Alexander Pike, head of the team.

"Our homes contribute much to our suicidal waste of energy. We can use our own waste — including our excrement — to provide methane gas for cooking.

"Our baths haven't improved since Minoan Crete — much of the heat runs out with the bath water. We feel we can recapture the heat and recycle the bath water — using both again.

"We can use the sun and the wind to provide heat and light for our homes and run our refrigerators. If we cannot generate quite enough power in our self-sufficient homes, we do not think it is going to diminish our living standards to dispense with such items as electric carving knives."

Pike, of Cambridge University faculty of architecture, has collected a team that includes engineers, biologists, chemists and architects. They believe they have already worked out the essential ideas for their self-sufficient house, and they expect to start experimenting with its various systems in the spring.

If all goes well, they expect construction to start later in 1974. British government grants are paying for the research into the equipment that will go into the house, while help from private industry is expected to pay for the construction.

Pike and his colleagues expect that their experimental home will run like this:

They will combine into one integrated system many principles that previously have been used in isolation: solar energy to provide heat; wind to provide power; the rain to provide water requirements; excrement, and food and garden wastes to provide gas for cooking; and new designs to recapture and recycle lost heat and water.

The south side of the house will combine glass with new ideas the team has in ways to collect the sun's heat. This solar energy will produce domestic hot water and warm air for space heating. When the sun isn't shining, stored solar energy will be recalled from a heat storage unit under the house where the heat is collected when the sun shines.

Wind power will be generated into electricity for lighting, fans, pumps, auxiliary hot water heaters, refrigerators, etc.

"Nobody wants to live among forests of windmills," Pike said. "We believe we may have an answer by using rotary vanes that can be integrated into the design of the roof of the house."

A miniature sewage plant — a "digestor" in a concrete tank under the house — will provide methane gas for cooking.

"The effluent of an average family can generate about 1½ cubic feet per person of methane a day," Pike said. "This is not enough for cooking purposes. You could keep goats in the cellar to produce more manure, but nobody wants to do that in a city.

"We think, however, we can get enough power for cooking through using food and garden wastes as well, through our solar energy to heat water for cooking, and through re-design of kitchen utensils and stoves."

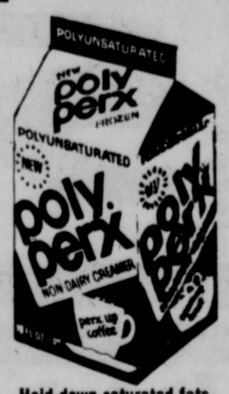

Water will be collected from the roof. The sun will heat some of it for personal washing purposes. A wind-power sink heater will provide hot water, combined with high pressure sprays, for dishwashing.

Warm, soapy water will be stored under the "sewage farm" and provide the heat the sewage needs. When it is cold, the soap will be filtered out, the water neutralized and re-used for other purposes.

"We can re-use water at different levels of purity. Pure drinking water is not needed for all functions" Pile said.

"We hope to get data from this experiment that will help us find new ways to live and use our energy resources wisely so we can meet the year 2000 without diminution of our present lifestyles."

Exon Backs Whelan For No. 2 Demo Spot

. . . Hopefuls' Ranks To Be Thinned

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Gov. J. James Exon Tuesday formally endorsed Hastings attorney Gerald Whelan as his choice for lieutenant governor in 1974, thus ending months of speculation and deflating the hopes of a host of politicians who sought the coveted No. 2 spot on the Exon ticket.

Exon's announcement, carefully timed to follow Whelan's press conference in Hastings, is expected to thin the ranks of Democrats who contemplated filing for the office.

However, in his endorsement Exon took pains to counteract any potential charges of boss politics in the selection of a running mate. Exon had taken a hands-off policy towards aspirants for lieutenant governor.

'For, Not Against'

"The point is that I am for Jerry Whelan and not against any other possible candidate who has consulted with me. The party nominees . . . will rightfully be decided by the Democratic voters in the May 14, 1974 primary election," Exon said.

"After careful consideration, I have advised all those who have discussed the subject with me that they are certainly free to make their own determination, and I have not attempted to eliminate anyone from the race."

Sen. Frank Lewis of Bellevue said, "I'm running and I plan to file shortly after the first of the year."

Lewis was among a group of seven men who attended a meeting Sunday night where Exon spelled out his decision to back Whelan. Lewis said Exon told him he would be "an acceptable" running mate should Lewis win the primary.

Out Of Running

Meanwhile, two possible contenders for the nomination, Exon's aide Norm Otto and Administrative Services Director Stan Matzke, disclosed they are no longer considering a bid for the lieutenant governor spot.

Exon reportedly told his staff members that they would have to resign their posts if they wished to run this spring.

Buoyed by favorable polls indicating Exon has a high likelihood of being re-elected and by an increased salary for the lieutenant governor effective in 1975, as many as 16 men were reported to have expressed publicly and privately their interest in teaming up with Exon in 1974.

In making his announcement only three days after Exon announced his intention to seek re-election, Whelan called it "a tremendous opportunity to run with Gov. Exon.

"If elected, I hope to be Gov. Exon's right arm. I pledge a vigorous campaign in the primary and, if elected, I will devote all of my energies and talents to bring Gov. Exon's lieutenant."

Complete Surprise

Whelan, the 48-year-old president of the State Board of Education, was a complete surprise to many observers who had been speculating on Exon's choice for a running mate.

According to Whelan, his rise as a lieutenant governor candidate began roughly two months ago when he visited with Exon to discuss a bill relating to the education of the handicapped.

Communication between the two continued until Whelan finally made the decision.

"After carefully examining the alternatives and receiving a vote of confidence from my family, I decided to file," he said.

Although Whelan's involvement with the Democratic Party dates back to the 1950s when he served as state party treasurer, he said he swore off running for political offices following his unsuccessful bid for the old First Congressional District seat in 1960.

Time and circumstances, he said, have changed that.

4-Vehicle Collision Totally Blocks I-80 For Over An Hour

The eastbound lanes of Interstate 80 at the north edge of Lincoln were blocked for about one hour and 20 minutes Tuesday by a collision involving four vehicles, according to the State Patrol.

The patrol said that reports from the scene indicated that a car was in collision with a snowplow and that two semi trucks following the vehicles became involved in the accident.

No one was injured in the accident on I-80 between the I-180 and Hwy. 77 interchanges, according to the patrol, although the snowplow was rolled onto its side by the impact.

Traffic was stalled from about 1:50 p.m. until 3:10 p.m., when one eastbound lane was cleared, according to the patrol.

The patrol reported that many semi trucks jackknifed on I-80, often blocking or partially blocking traffic, as the snowstorm sweeping through the state made driving hazardous.

Health Planners Worried By Upjohn Corp.

By MILAN WALL
Star Staff Writer

Worried that competition from the Upjohn Corp. may drive existing home-health care agencies out of business, the Lancaster County Health Planning Council (LCHPC) Tuesday decided to form a task force to look into the pharmaceutical giant's plans for Lincoln.

The firm has announced it plans to open a for-profit home health care and homemaker service in Lincoln and Omaha similar to the services it provides in 170 other cities nationwide.

The Omaha office has already opened, and early 1974 has been set as the target date for launching the Lincoln operation.

It was the effect Upjohn's plans may have on already existing nonprofit agencies in Lincoln that prompted the discussion at the LCHPC meeting.

In Jeopardy

Opening the discussion was Harold Norby, director of Tabitha Home, who told the health planners Tabitha fears Upjohn may jeopardize Tabitha's own home health care and homemaker services.

"Competition for trained and skilled staff will hurt our program," said Norby, as pay scales increase. Norby said he understands "Upjohn has unlimited funds" and may be able to provide services in the short-run at "extremely low" costs.

"If they do come in, then I see the need for them to truly become part of the total delivery system," he said.

James Ziettlow of the Lincoln Areawide Project on Aging said he is convinced Upjohn would be duplicating services that are or will be provided by local nonprofit concerns.

"I feel we can provide the services with the existing agencies," said Ziettlow. "We don't need Upjohn, especially in the area of home health services."

Norby noted Tabitha's home care services, founded in 1966, broke even this year for the first time with federal funding help.

And Sister Phyllis Hundoff of Madonna Home said that institution is dropping costs of its home care programs only because it's been able to expand its program.

Madonna can double the size of its operation, she said, and hopes to do so.

Others suggested the community should support the existing community services with the kind of marketing techniques Upjohn utilizes.

Task Force

The discussion led to the decision to appoint a task force with representatives from the government and private nonprofit agencies in the community who are involved in home care.

The task force will seek Upjohn comments on its plans for its Lincoln operation.

In other matters, the LCHPC endorsed the Bryan Memorial Hospital request for city funds to expand its mobile heart team services.

The $63,600, if granted by the city, will enable Bryan to expand the mobile team's operation to 24 hours a day. It now operates 18 hours a day.

The health council also endorsed the Open Door Health Center request for $9,895 in United Fund support to permit it to open a health advocacy program.

Chamber Installs Olsson President

The new president broke chamber tradition by including two women — County Commissioner Jan Gauger and Barbara Lautzenheiser of Bankers Life Nebraska — among the eight appointive members of the board of directors. Traditionally, the president of the Women's Division has been the only female member of the board.

Other chamber officials installed Wednesday night for the coming year:

First vice president, Paul Amen, president of the National Bank of Commerce; second vice president, Leo Beck, vice president of Alexander and Alexander; third vice president, James Bradley, president of Food Host USA; treasurer, Jack D. Campbell, general agent, Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co., and secretary, John R. Fraker, who also serves as permanent executive vice president of the chamber.

Another School Aid Bill Is Being Drafted

By United Press International

The chairman of the Legislature's education committee said Tuesday he is having legislation drafted in order to once again try for an increase in state aid to public schools.

Sen. Jerome Warner of Waverly said the legislation would be drafted for later consideration by the education committee, at which time a decision would be made on whether the committee would sponsor it.

The legislation, Warner said, would amount to a duplicate of this year's bill in some ways. That measure would have required state tax sources to finance half the operational costs of local schools, or about $150 million a year.

However, the senator said being considered is a different method of getting the money and distributing it.

Warner said his idea is to give local school district direct rebates of income tax money collected in those specific districts.

"This would recognize that property wealth is not the only measure of the worth of a school district," Warner said.

In other words, Warner said, not only would local property taxes go towards financing a particular school district, but so would the very money generated by incomes in that area.

The state of Kansas, Warner said, is currently using a system similar to the one he is proposing.

The way the system would work, the senator said, would be that the rebate money would be a portion of the $150 million and then there would be additional equalization aid on top of that to complete the state's obligations.

This year the aid increase bill came within one vote of passage. The one vote was needed in order to override Gov. J. James Exon's veto of the measure.

Instead, the Legislature approved a $20 million increase in aid, which brought the total for the current year to $55 million.

Mother Of 2 Operates 70-Ton Earth Mover

Sidney, Neb. (AP) — Mrs. Judy Johner of Cheyenne, a confirmed farm girl, has fulfilled a new ambition by winning a job as a heavy equipment operator with the Platte Valley Construction Co.

The attractive, 22-year-old mother of two boys has been driving a 140,000-pound earth moving scraper on the Interstate 80 construction site near here the last couple of months.

Mrs. Johner, when a young girl, worked with tractors and machinery on her parents' farm, but little did she know then she would be driving a tractor that moves 60 tons of dirt in one haul.

The company gave her the opportunity when men failed to fill openings for the job. Mrs. Johner had applied first for a tractor operator position to pull a packer along the interstate construction.

Her husband, Edward, heard company officials say they might have to hire women. He suggested that his wife might be interested.

"I really got excited when they told me to try my luck at the 660 Caterpillar," Mrs. Johner said.

Stanley Not Planning To Retire

By United Press International

State Education Commissioner Cecil Stanley says he doesn't plan to retire, at least not voluntarily, when he reaches the age of 65 in February.

But Gerald Whelan of Hastings, chairman of the State Board of Education, said Tuesday the decision really isn't Stanley's to make.

"The law says 65 and when he reaches that age, that's it," Whelan said.

Stanley contends it has been the policy of the state board to retain employes until they reached the age of 68.

But Whelan said the law requires retirement of state employes at 65 and allows for exceptions only when replacements for critical jobs can't be found. The exceptions would only be for a year at a time.

The board, however, didn't mention the subject and Stanley said the board members were holding secret meetings to get rid of him.

Whelan said he and four others did meet and it was decided not to bring the subject up because "we didn't want to embarass Cecil — he's been too good an employe for that kind of thing."

11 Named To Energy Unit By Mayor

Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf has announced the appointment of 11 people to the Energy Coordination Committee.

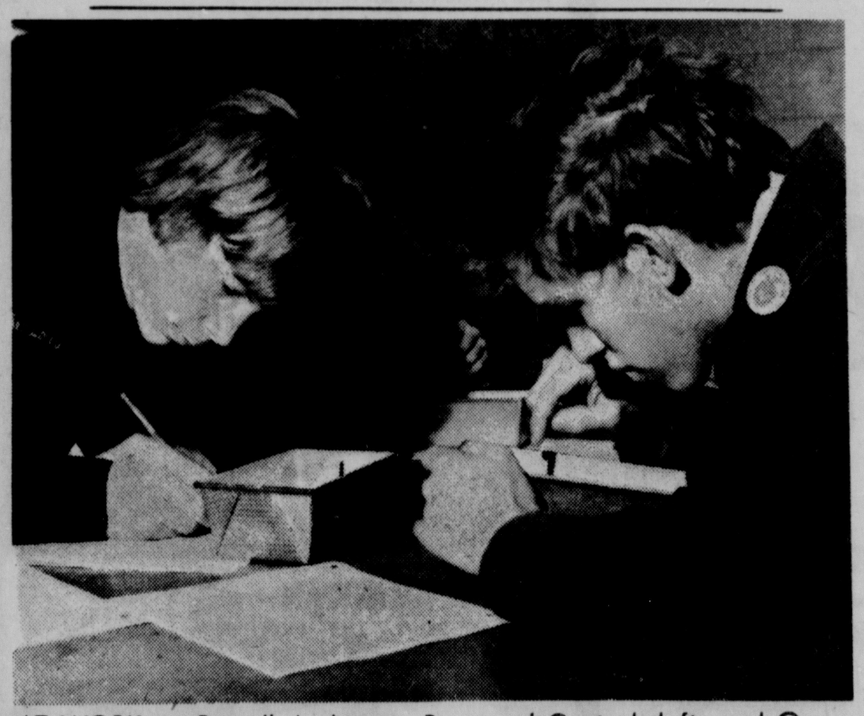

The committee was created to advise elected officials on measures which could be taken to aid in meeting the energy crisis, Schwartzkopf said.

Witnesses Saw Auto Before Omaha Killing

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—Authorities in the Omaha area were working Tuesday night with information provided by a service station manager and an attendant in the investigation into the shotgun slaying of Francis D. Croker Jr., 29.

Crocker, who resigned recently as marshal at Fort Calhoun north of Omaha, was shot to death Sunday night as he drove on Interstate 680 at the northwest edge of Omaha.

Police said three to six shots from what was believed to be a 12 gauge shotgun were fired into the victim.

Omaha Police Sgt. Robert Thorson said a service station manager reported Crocker may have been involved in a high-speed chase with his slayer shortly before he was shot.

Thorson said the manager had offered a ride to a high school girl who works at the filling station after a party Sunday night.

The officer said the manager related that while he was driving on nearby 72nd Street he saw two cars approaching from the opposite direction at high speeds. He said the pursuing car was a white Ford and it appeared the right door once bore a "shield-like decal" like those placed on police cars.

The witness said a few minutes later he and his companion observed a car off the Interstate and the white Ford was stopped nearby.

Police said the station manager told them he saw a man standing nearby with a shotgun or rifle in his hand.

Police said the girl identified a car seen in the area shortly after the shooting as a 1965 or 1966 white Ford Galaxy.

Authorities said the first shots were fired at Crocker as he traveled west on the Interstate. The car then went down an embankment and stopped near State Street. Then, someone apparently walked up to the car and fired at Crocker's face from close range.

Sheriff's deputies and police are investigating. If Crocker died when first shot on the Interstate it is an Omaha police case and if he was killed where his car came to rest the case is in the jurisdiction of the Douglas County sheriff.

Lt. James Perry of the Omaha police homicide unit said no suspects were in custody

Delayed Report Ups Traffic Toll

The victim was Elmer C. Sylvester, 48, of Denver, Colo.

Sylvester was killed Nov. 26 on Interstate 80 near Odessa when the truck he was driving ran into a ditch and struck a tree.

Roca Man's Shorthorn Places Eighth

Roca (UPI) — Galen Crawford of Roca had the eighth ranking carcass steer at the 1973 American Royal in Kansas City, officials said Tuesday. His shorthorn steer was the highest ranking carcass steer shown by a Nebraskan at this event. The animal was the reserve champion in the FFA shorthorn show.

Kilmer Named To NAC Committe

Omaha (UPI) — Douglas County Clerk Lloyd Kilmer has been appointed a member of the National Association of Counties (NAC) local determination steering committee. One of the principal tasks of the committee is the development of statements for revision of the American County Platform, the official policy document of the NCA. The platform will be presented to the convention delegates at the association's annual conference in Florida next July.

Fremont Police Go To 40 Hours

Fremont — Police in Fremont, one of only a few cities in the midwestern states that maintains a 44-hour work week in the police department, will cut back to a 40-hour week. Those currently working 44 hours include patrolmen, detectives, sergeants, captains, the assistant chief and command personnel. Fremont firemen will get a pay adjustment of about $25-30 because of the police action; according to negotiations made in May, when the police department's hours were reduced, adjustments would follow to bring salaries in the police and fire departments on a parity. Officials said the 40-hour work week for police should not necessitate hiring new policemen.

Hedges Announces Retirement

McCook — Winston Hedges, project manager of the Kansas River Projects for the McCook Bureau of Reclamation office, has announced his retirement from federal service effective Dec. 31. Hedges is in charge of project development, construction, operation and maintenance activities for the bureau in the Kansas River Basin, which covers the northern half of Kansas, southern third of Nebraska and part of northeastern Colorado. He also directs similar bureau work in the Niobrara and Lower Platte River Basins in north-central and northern Nebraska. The bureau has named no replacement yet for Hedger.

Nebraska City Mayor Going Full-Time

Nebraska City — Mayor Ervin Rogers, 69, will become a full-time mayor of the town effective Jan. 1. He has sold his share of Rogers and Schmitz Auto Electric to Al Schmitz and will work full-time in his public office.

This time, Evans has invited D. X. Bible, who coached at both Nebraska and Texas, to fill the honoree roll. Bible compiled an 80-15-7 record at Nebraska from 1929 through 1936 and was 63-31-3 from 1937 through 1946 at Texas.

Among those joining Bible for his Dallas activities will be George Sauer and Sam Francis, who were members of his Husker squads.

Bible, who is 81 years old, lives in Austin, Tex.

The Alabama-Notre Dame Sugar Bowl game is only the ninth bowl game in history to pit two major unbeaten teams and there have been 335 major bowl games played since 1902.

Nebraska's romp over Alabama two years ago in the Orange Bowl was one of the other eight involving two unbeaten teams.

Better Than Pickin' Cotton

Dallas Cowboys' linebacker Lee Roy Jordan has some advise for any pro footballer grumbling about working conditions.

"This football business is like a day off compared to what I did back on the farm when I was a youngster," he says. "You don't get patted on the back or written up in the press picking cotton."

Rich Hitchcock, 6-3, 195-pound son of former Lincoln High and Nebraska football player Richard Hitchcock, was named this fall as an offensive tackle on the All-Bergen County, N.J., football team.

The Hitchcocks now live in Saddle River, N.J., and Rich was a member of the Northern Highlands High School team. Among his father's Lincoln High teammates were Bill Pfeiff and Herm Rohrig.

Jack Nicklaus is well known for his tee shots, but his fellow pros in a survey coducted by Golf Digest have named him the best putter on the PGA Tour.

Says fellow pro Jim Colbert, "For all my money, my house and wife and kids on a one shot basis, I've got to have Nicklaus putt it in."

Going From Hell To Heaven

Bobby Proctor was a new assistant football coach at Oklahoma this year, having come from Vanderbilt. Says Proctor:

"It was like moving from hell to heaven. I've never seen athletes anywhere like they have here. I've seen entire conferences that didn't have as many good players as they have on this one team."

When Indiana football coach Lee Corso received a fruitcake from an anonymous sender, he refused to open the can, explaining, "When you're 2-9, you don't mess around with unsigned fruitcakes."

Atlanta Falcons' football coach Norm Van Brocklin has always been one to call a spade a spade by putting an adjective in front of the second spade.

In analyzing his team's seaon-ending swoon, Van Brocklin allowed, "Our guys began to get the idea they could win without working at it. They began to believe it when their friendly bartender and the whores on Peachtree Street told them they were great."

We know a fellow, who says he went to a $100 a plate dinner the other night and he adds, "It was at my house."

To Dallas Merchants, Cornhuskers Are No. 1

... NEBRASKA FANS HOLD COTTON BOWL RECORD FOR SPENDING MONEY

DALLAS (UPI) — The Cotton Bowl, or as it is known locally, the University of Texas invitational, could not come up with a member of the Top Ten for the guest role this year but as far as the merchants of Dallas are concerned the Nebraska Cornhuskers are No. 1.

This marks the sixth straight appearance for the Texas Longhorns in the Cotton Bowl, which automatically has the Southwest Conference as the host team. No other conference team has ever made more than two consecutive Cotton Bowl trips.

It will also be the Longhorns 15th trip to the game, which began in 1937. No other league club has been to more than six.

This is only the second time 11th-ranked Nebraska has ever been to the Cotton Bowl, but the storeowners of Dallas still remember that first time.

The always loyal Nebraska fans who filled the city in 1965 for their team's meeting with Arkansas still hold the record for the most money spent by a band of football fanatics during Cotton Bowl week.

And the energy crisis has apparently done little to interfere with the zeal of Nebraska fans. An allotment of 15,000 tickets (the stadium holds 72,032) was sent by the Cotton Bowl Athletic Association to Lincoln, Neb., and Nebraska officials asked for more — which they received.

The outcome of the New Year's Day contest (kickoff is 2 p.m. EST) could well rest on the strained knee of Roosevelt Leaks —the Longhorn junior fullback who gained 1,415 yards this season and placed third in the Heisman Trophy balloting.

Leaks strained the knee in the Longhorns final regular season game Thanksgiving Day and although he is expected to play it is not known how effective he can be.

He must be at near top form for the Longhorns to have a good shot at downing Nebraska since Texas has only an average offensive punch without him.

"They can move the football," said Royal. "We won't be able to shut them down like Oklahoma did."

The reference to Oklahoma is a painful one for both Royal and Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne, not to mention Cotton Bowl officials. The Sooners crunched Texas in October, 52-13, and then shut out Nebraska the day after Thanksgiving, 27-0.

The Cornhuskers, however, should have more success against the Longhorns with the pass catching senior Frosty Anderson and the straight ahead power of fullback Maury Damkroger.

This is the fourth straight year the guest team in the Cotton Bowl has lost its final regular season game and has come into the contest with something to prove. Notre Dame, Penn State and Alabama all lost before playing Texas and two of them —the Irish and the Nittany Lions — whipped the Longhorns.

Nebraska has also had some problems since the end of the season.

After some thought on the matter Osborne said Dutton had lost his right to be Nebraska captain, but that Dutton would play against the Longhorns.

"Our main concern is that everyone be unified and willing to give 100 per cent," said Osborne. "John has satisfied me he will do this and I'm sure the rest of the squad feels the same way."

As is the Cotton Bowl's custom, each of the participating teams will receive 37.5 per cent of the receipts and the Cotton Bowl Athletic Association will keep the other 25 per cent.

FINLEY FILES SUIT

Cronin To Meet With A's Boss

... HEARINGS CONTINUE

Boston (UPI) — In the midst of two days of meetings which are aimed at settling the long Dick Williams dispute, Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley filed a federal court suit in San Francisco Tuesday in an attempt to keep Williams from managing the New York Yankees next year.

The Yanks signed Williams to a three-year contract last week but williams, who managed the A's for the past three years, still has two years left on his Oakland contract.

Williams claims Finley released him from the contract on national TV after the World Series after Williams announced he was quitting. Finley insists he didn't release Williams.

American League president Joe Cronin, who is stepping down at the end of this year, met with Yankee president Gabe Paul and Detroit general manager Jimmy Campbell for four hours Tuesday.

Cronin would have no comment on the hearings but said, "I'll make a decision as soon as possible."

On Wednesday, Cronin meets with Paul and Finley and their attorneys in the second day of the two days of hearings. Cronin said he will have to spend some time weighing the evidence before he makes his decision.

Commenting on Finley's move, Paul said, "we're in the hands of our lawyers and will await their direction."

Williams arrived in Boston Tuesday night with his attorney John Remsen. They came from Florida. When Williams arrived, he leaned over to Paul and asked him quietly how Tuesday's hearing with the Tigers had gone.

Remsen added, "Dick is here as a witness and I'm here as an observer. After we're finished Wednesday, we'll go back to Florida.

In Chicago, Finley said he would withdraw his suit if he is given what he considers, "proper compensation." He added, "Williams can go with our blessing if we're properly compensated. If not, the suit stands."

The Tigers got involved because in early October they signed Ralph Houk, who resigned as Yankee manager on the last day of the regular season, to manage their team in 1974. Once Finley refused to give the Yanks permission to talk to Finley, the Yanks noted the Tigers had never asked their permission to sign Houk. The Tigers insist they're not involved in the Williams dispute.

After the Yanks and Finley couldn't agree on compensation for Williams, the Yanks went ahead and signed Williams without Finley's permission.

Williams' name is now on two contracts and unless Cronin can settle the matter in his office this week, it'll be up to the courts to decide which one is valid.

Finley's petition in district court said, "the news media reported that Williams...had purported to execute a contract to serve as manager of that club (the Yanks) for the years 1974 through 1976."

He asked the district court for injunctions restraining Williams from performing his services for any professional baseball club other than the A's during the next two years, for a declaration that a contract is in full force, and for costs of the suit.

His loss would result in "irreparable injury and damage to Finley," the suit said.

"During his career as a baseball manager, Williams has compiled an impressive record and has achieved widespread recognition as one of the outstanding managers in baseball," the petition said. "In two successive years he led the Athletics to the championship of the American League and to the world championship, the highest attainable achievement for a professional baseball team."

The suit also said that since Williams had received numerous awards and honors and widespread publicity, he had become extremely popular and "is a great factor in attendance, gate receipts, success of the Athletics on the playing field and the financial success of the Athletics."

The suit also said that Finley "has expended great effort and great sums of money in promoting and enhancing the popularity, public image, and name of Williams" and "has shaped the playing personnel of the Athletics to suit the style of play followed by Williams."

He also said the Athletics "employed four coaches who are personal friends of Williams and whose skills and value are uniquely dependent on their ability to work with Williams."

Cronin has refused to comment on the dispute or Finley's suit. "I have to go into the meetings with an open mind," he said.

A spokesman for Bowie Kuhn, the baseball commissioner, said he would have no comment.

Phillips' Kicks Boost Blues To 20-14 Win

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — Kicker John Phillips of Xavier booted field goals of 29 and 33 yards Tuesday night to lead the Blues to a 20-14 victory over the Grays in the 36th annual Blue-Gray football classic.

The Blues moved ahead early with quarterback Jesse Frietas of San Diego State driving them 32 yards in six plays, capped by a three-yard scoring run by Pete Taggares of Washington.

With the Grays unable to mount a sustained drive, the Blues drove deep into Gray territory early in the second quarter before stalling on the 13 and Phillips booted his first field goal to run the score to 100.

The Blues came back in the third quarter, driving 38 yards in five plays with Frietas lobbing a 10-yard touchdown pass to Gerald Tinker of Kent State.

Phillips came on in the fourth quarter with the Blues stalled on the Gray 17 to kick his final field goal and put the game away.

It was the first win for the Blues in five years.

Frietas was named the game's most valuable player. He threw 23 passes, completing 14 for 168 yards.

"I threw the ball pretty well," Frietas said. "In this kind of game you don't have that complicated an offense, but they don't have as much time to prepare their defense.

"In this kind of game it's much easier to pass than to run," said Frietas, who will play in the All-America Bowl in Tampa Jan. 6.

Holtz Credits 'Total Effort'

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — North Carolina State Coach Lou Holtz says the Wolfpack came through with a total effort in their 31-18 victory over Kansas Monday night in the Liberty Bowl football game.

"That's something we've tried to get all year, Holtz said. "Our kicking game was superb. So was the offense and defense."

He praised David Jaynes, Kansas' All-American quarterback, who hit 24 of 38 passes for 218 yards and one touchdown.

"We are a better football team than the way we played tonight," he said. "But at the same time that is in no way meant to take anything away from North Carolina State. Tonight they were the better team."

"We didn't get a fumble recovery and threw a couple of interceptions which hurt," Fambrough continued. "We had chances to get two fumbles in the first half but missed."

The two were the only ones North Carolina had.

The game was close until the fourth quarter when North Carolina State, which finished the season 9-3, moved ahead 31-10 on Charley Young's 12-yard run and a 31-yard TD run by freshman defensive tackle Jim Henderson, who picked off a Jaynes' pass.

NFL 'No Shows' Total 1,037,309

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Football League has reached a final total of 1,037,309 no-shows from 182 games played this season.

The New Haven Conn. Register learned Tuesday that the number of no-shows—ticketholders who stayed home from the Minnesota-New York Giants' game at the Yale Bowl in New Haven, Conn., was 20,744.

There had been a delay in getting figures from the Yale Bowl, the Giants' temporary home, since the park has no turnstiles and ticket stubs had to be counted.

According to NFL figures, not counting the Vikings-Giants game the league figures showed 1,016,565 no-shows this season.

"It's just a ballpark figure, but we think about nine per cent of all tickets sold this year will be no-shows," Don Weiss, league public relations director, said Tuesday.

The total so far also represents, according to the NFL, a 63 per cent increase over last year.

Before the season began, Commissioner Pete Rozelle warned that Congressional passage of a bill lifting television blackouts on games sold out 72 hours in advance would be particularly harmful once the weather turned bad.

His prophecy came true last weekend. No-shows on the league's final regular season weekend were 190,383 for 13 games. The highest report came from Kansas City where 35,793 stayed away in 20-degree weather from the Chiefs' finale against San Diego.

Miami had the highest number of no-shows for the season, with 118,156 failing to appear for seven Dolphin home games.

The NFL also is compiling figures on how the no-show is affecting income and concessions, and the results will be presented for Congressional review before April.

Vols Returning Gator Tickets

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The University of Tennessee is returning nearly two-thirds of its allotment of 18,000 Gator Bowl football game tickets.

"We're only going to need about a third of the tickets they sent us," said Gus Manning, administrative assistant to the Tennessee athletic department.

Nate Archibald of the Kansas City-Omaha Kings, last year's leading scorer and assist leader in the National Basketball Association will be honored as the group's "Sportsman of the Year."

JudgeDenies Injunction

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — The city's $72-million anti-trust action against the National League suffered a setback Tuesday when a federal judge refused to grant an order that would have blocked the shift of the franchise to Washington, D. C.

U.S. District Court Judge Howard B. Turrentine said his ruling was not a reflection on the merits of the city's suit against the league, its owners and several public officials, including Vice President Gerald R. Ford.

Turrentine said the temporary restraining order sought by the city was a drastic step. He said were a transfer to be judged wrongful the city would be "adequately compensated."

The suit, filed last week, accused the defendants of conspiring to deprive the city of its lawful business relationship with the baseball club. The club has 15 years remaining on a 20-year pact for use of San Diego Stadium.

In its suit the city alleged the defendants efforts were in violation of federal anti-trust legislation. The lawsuit said that since a date believed to be early 1971 the defendants had conspired to shift the franchise.

Earlier this month National League owners approved transfer of the franchise to a Washington group headed by businessman Joseph Danzansky. The league set a deadline of Friday for conclusion of negotiations relating to the sale.

Secretariat Captures Top Honors

NEW YORK (AP) — Secretariat, who captured the hearts of millions while winning the first Triple Crown in 25 years, once again easily outdistanced all opposition Wednesday, winning "Horse of the Year" honors.

The Meadow Stable 3-year-old was a unanimous choice for the Eclipse Award in balloting sponsored by the Thoroughbred Racing Association, the Daily Racing Form and the National Turf Writers' Association.

Secretariat also was unanimous choice as champion 3year-old colt and champion turf horse, giving him a total of five Eclipse awards. He won 1972 honors as horse of the year and champion 2-year-old colt.

It was Secretariat's victories in the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont that made him the most celebrated horse of the year, but it was his impressive victories in the Man o'War Stakes at Belmont and in the Canadian International Championship that earned him the turf title.

Overall, Secretariat won nine of 12 starts, was second twice and third once. He earned $860,404 in 1973, raising his lifetime earnings to $1,316,808. He was retired to stud last month under terms of an earlier agreement.

Meadow Stable had another Eclipse winner in Riva Ridge, who was awarded top honors among colts, horses and geldings 4-years-old and over. An Eclipse winner as a 2-year-old in 1971, Riva Ridge won five of his nine starts and joined the millionaire's club with his year's earnings of $212,452.

Fred W. Hooper's Susan's Girl, the champion 3-year-old filly of 1972, was voted the top older filly or mare. Shecky Greene, winner of nine of 15 starts, was voted champion sprinter, with Linda's Chief runner-up. In the Steeplechase and Hurdle division, the winner was Athenian Idol.

'Basic' Drills For Longhorns

Austin, Tex. (UPI) — The Texas Longhorns worked out for an hour Tuesday in preparation for their New Year's Day match with Nebraska, but missed the services of several players because of final exams.

The Longhorns concentrated on basics, and will not begin specific preparations for Nebraska until after Christmas, a team spokesman said.

New Arbitration Ruling May Aid Contract Rifts

BALTIMORE (AP) — General Manager Frank Cashen of the Baltimore Orioles is apprehensive, but optimistic, about baseball's new arbitration rule which becomes effective this season.

"It could be that both sides will become more realistic about negotiations," Cashen said Tuesday as he prepared to mail out 1974 contract offers to the Orioles.

"I have an open mind about it," Cashen said, "but I guess all clubs are sort of apprehensive about what's going to happen.

"But I can't imagine that the Orioles will have many cases of arbitration. We have a generous payroll which last season topped $1 million, and we haven't had too many holdouts over the years."

Veteran third baseman Brooks Robinson, Baltimore's player representative, said no one could predict how much arbitration would result but added: "I think the club and player are going to get together in most cases."

Under baseball's new grievance procedures, a player with at least two years' experience in the major leagues, can ask for arbitration between Feb. 1 and Feb. 10.

Instead of the usual arbitration method of seeking a compromise, however, the arbitrator must choose either the figure offered by the club or the one sought by the player.

The new rule could lead to some jockeying or bluffing, but Cashen feels it might cause both sides to become more realistic because of the either-or provisions.

"If we make an offer, the player refuses and then asks for arbitration," Cashen said, "we might then reduce our offer. If the offer is reduced on or after Feb. 10, the player has seven more days to seek arbitration."

The Orioles have won the American League's Eastern Division championship four times in the last five seasons, and as a result have a steadily rising payroll.

Palmer, who was voted the league's Cy Young award after posting his fourth consecutive 20-victory season, is expected to go over $100,000 this year. His three high-salaried teammates may be asked to take pay cuts.

Under another new baseball rule, Powell as a 10-year veteran negate a deal if he doesn't want to report to a particular team.

Kings To Stay In Omaha

Omaha, Neb. (AP) — Unless the sky falls, the Kansas City-Omaha Kings will continue to play some of their homes games here.

Joe Axelson, Kings' president and general manager, told reporters Tuesday that the team had signed to play 30 games per year in Kansas City's new Crosby Kemper Arena, leaving 11 dates open for Omaha games.

He added that the team is planning to add an exhibition game to the 11-game, regular Omaha slate.

Cyclones Triumph, 77-65

AMES, Iowa (AP)—Iowa State coasted to its fifth basketball victory in six starts, 77-65 over San Francisco State Tuesday.

The Cyclones held a shakey 30-27 lead at halftime, but five baskets by Hercle Ivy in the first five minutes of the second period put the game out of reach for the Gators, who dropped their seventh straight.

Iowa State was without Coach Maury John, who was bedridden with the flu, and starting guard Eric Heft, who was nursing a back injury.

Assistant Coach Gus Guydon handled the team.

Bill Drew had 16 points for San Francisco State. The Gators shot 59 per cent from the field, but were out rebounded 31-24 by the taller Cyclones.

Howe Named All-Star

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Gordie Howe, still setting records at the age of 45, was named a pro hockey All-Star for the 23rd time in his illustrious career Tuesday, making the West Division squad for the second World Hockey Association game here on Jan. 3.

Howe, a former National Hockey League star with the Detroit Red Wings who ended a 21-month retirement from the sport to join the Houston Aeros last summer, was named a third-team right wing behind teammate Frank Hughes and Danny Lawson of the Vancouver Blazers.

Starting left wing Bobby Hull of the Winnipeg Jets, also a perennial All-Star in his NHL playing days with the Chicago Black Hawks, will be playing coach of the West team.

In balloting, counted on the basis of five points for a first-place vote, three for second and one for third, Edmonton Oilers' center Jim Harrison led the West squad. He received 50 points on 10 first-place votes. The WHA's second-leading scorer will center the starting line of Hull and Hughes.

Two other members of the Oilers made the West starting six, with Al Hamilton on defense and Jack Norris in goal. Defenseman Rick Smith of the host Minnesota Fighting Saints will be the other starting defenseman.

Other members of the West squad, which lost to the East 62 in last year's contest, include goaltenders John Garrett of Minnesota and Winnipeg's Ernie Wakely; defensemen Poul Popiel of Houston, Bart Crashley and Gerry Odrowski of the Los Angeles Sharks, and Larry Hornung of Winnipeg.

Minnesota's Mike Walton will be the second-team center, with Larry Lund of Houston third. Edmonton's Ron Climie and Marc Tardif of Los Angeles will be the other right wings.

Rodgers said, he has developed a strong affection for Montreal and will spend the off season there—at least the next two years. That's how much time is left on his three-year contarct which calls for an estimated more than $100,000 a year.

Rodgers said he has "talked to a few people" about the proposed World Football League. He said "I believe it's real."

As for the National Football League: "I'll stay where I am until my contract is over—at least. Then we'll see."

Rodgers said he has enrolled in French classes at McGill University and is "into a lot of community things."

He said he is doing public relations work for the Alouettes.

Wahoo's Bronson Earns Award

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Writer

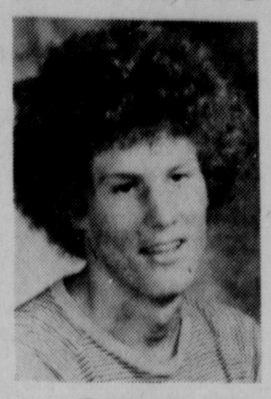

When Bob Bronson scored 37 points last weekend in Wahoo's relatively easy win over Valley, Warrior coach Bruce Klemme made a fast break for the school record books.

Research shows that the 6-5 Bronson tied the school single-game scoring retord already shared by two players, but broke the field goal mark with a 16 for 21 effort against Valley.

For his performance, which has helped Wahoo to a 3-0 record, Bronson earns the Sunday Journal and Star's second prep basketball Player of the Week prize.

"He's much more aggressive this year. Most of his shots against Valley were close-in. He also had 19 rebounds," Klemme says of Bronson, an honorable mention all-Capital Conference selection last season.

Bronson's 37 points tied the Wahoo school record set by Mike Miller in 1967 against North Bend and tied early the next season by Dick French against Papillion.

Bob Bronson
Ties School Record

"In addition to shooting 76 per cent from the field and 71 per cent from the free throw line," notes Klemme, "Bob had 10 offensive and 9 defensive rebounds, three steals and 22 points in the second half. He's 24 for 36 (67 per cent) from the field in our first three games against Waverly, David City and Valley."

If Wahoo wins Friday night on the road against conference favorite Arlington, it will be the Warriors' best basketball start in 15 years.

"This game will certainly be the test as to what kind of a ball club we are this year," admits Klemme, who believes "we certainly have a chance to be the best in our conference. We haven't finished high or even done very well in the Capital since the old Ak-Sar-Ben Conference changed."

Bronson, Wahoo's second leading scorer and second leading rebounder on last season's 10-8 team, plays in select Class B company. Teammates Rick Wagner, a nifty assist man, and 6-6 Mark Simmerman are both capable of 30-point productions, according to Klemme.

Others who'll receive Player of Week cards:

Paul Fox, Beatrice — Senior forward hit 13 of 16 field goal attempts and finished with 32 points as Orangemen defeated Fairbury, 60-47, for the first time in five seasons.

Doug Charko, Lincoln Pius X — Senior forward hit game high 23 points, including a 10-foot jump shot with two seconds remaining in the second overtime to give 'Bolts a 52-51 victory over Fairbury.

Rod Smith, Sutton — In unbeaten team's 68-44 win over Harvard, the 6-2½ senior had 19 points and 13 rebounds. Then, in 58-55 overtime win over Hastings St. Cecilia, he scored 17 points on a 7-for-12 field goal effort and collected 15 rebounds.

Russ Thede, Palmer — Six-six three-year starter led Class D team to fourth win, an impressive 65-62 decision over Class C Genoa. Thede hit 10 of 14 field goals and 9 of 11 free throws for 29 points and retrieved 19 rebounds.

Rich Gillespie, David City Aquinas — The 6-3 senior hit 12 of 19 field goals and 3 of 4 free throws for 27 points, collected 18 rebounds and contributed five steals and two assists in Aquinas' 56-34 win over a taller Fremont Bergan club.

Steve Jones, Holdrege — Six-one senior connected on 10 of 14 field goal tries, scored 25 points, snared 12 rebounds (seven offensive) and had five assists as unbeaten Dusters rallied from 6-point halftime deficit to upend York, 67-52.

Craig Merry, Pender — The 6-3 senior scored 34 points and had 43 rebounds in 5½ quarters of action in leading team to weekend wins over Oakland-Craig and Emerson-Hubbard.

Rod Tegtmeier, Davenport — Senior guard deposited 17 of 28 field goal attempts enroute to 38-point performance in team's 86-70 win over Byron.

Evan Schnegelberger, Geneva — Rangy 6-6 junior scored 26 points in Wildcats' 69-55 upset of Seward and engineered another upset with 23 points in 56-46 win over previously unbeaten Henderson.

Max Kaiser, Imperial — His free throw in the final seconds provided Class C team with 47-45 win over Class B Kimball. He finished with 19 points, grabbed 12 rebounds and blocked six shots.

—AT LEAST THIS YEAR—

No Horse Racing Expected In Iowa

Des Moines, Iowa (AP) — Legalized horse-race betting in Iowa is at least a year away, according to an Associated Press poll of state legislators.

A movement to legalize parimutuel betting began growing in the 1973 legislature as some lawmakers saw taxes on the betting as a way to increase state income.

But a $119 million surplus in the state treasury, along with a rush to finish the 1974 session in time for candidates to campaign for the June primary election, is expected to keep many who have favored horse racing luke warm on the issue.

One of the strongest backers of a parimutuel betting bill, Sen. George Kinley, D-Des Moines, feels the legislature should at least debate the subject during the 1974 session.

"When polls as late as last spring show the majority of the people in Iowa are in favor of parimutuel betting, it's inconceivable to me that the issue will not come on the floor of either house for at least a vote," Kinley said.

Kinley, who introduced one parimutuel bill in the Senate last session, said he is having another drafted in line with proposals made by a legislative committee which has been studying the issue this fall.

Many legislators say they oppose legalized horse tracks with betting in the state because of corruption in state government where the tracks are legal.

"The amount of revenue it would raise — $3 million annually at the most — is not worth the problems it would cause," said Sen. Cloyd Robinson, D-Cedar Rapids. "With a surplus in the treasury, why take the chance of corrupting state government."

Sen. William Plymat, R-Urbandale, said the state should stay away from parimutuel betting because "one gambling idea leads to another." He said that lotteries operated by some eastern states have not produced the revenue collected and legislators in those states are now calling for "wide open gambling."

Rep. Dennis Butler, R-Council Bluffs, contends the betting will leave less money to be spent with retail merchants "with a resulting loss in sales tax revenue" for the state.

But Rep. Wally Horn, D-Cedar Rapids, contends parimutuel betting should be allowed at state and county affairs to give them additional attractions and income. With the fuel crisis, he said, "we may not have car races."

Kinley said the legislative committee studied parimutuel racing in Nebraska and "nobody could point out to us crime having risen . . . and nobody could dispute what legalized parimutuel betting would do for the horse business, hotel business, restaurant and grain businesses."

Defense Carried Tigers To Sun Bowl

...MISSOURI, AUBURN LACKED OFFENSIVE PUNCH

EL PASO, Tex. (UPI) — The offense may be what attracts the fans in college football, but for Auburn and Missouri it's the defense that is bringing them to a bowl game.

Auburn, a mainstay of the tough Southeastern Conference, and Missouri, a growing power in the Big Eight, will meet for the first time in their history Dec. 29, in the 39th edition of the Sun Bowl. Game time is set for 1 p.m. EST.

Both relied on tenacious defenses to come up with a winning if not spectacular season. Both were plagued with injuries on offense. And, both will be trying to prove they were worthy of a bowl bid despite having finished well down in their conference races.

Auburn, 6-5 during the year but only 2-5 in SEC play, lost its final two games of the year, including a 35-0 beating at the hands of unbeaten and Sugar Bowl bound Alabama. Missouri, which won its first six games, including a 13-12 victory over Nebraska, finished the year even more infamously than Auburn, losing to Oklahoma, Iowa State and Kansas in a 7-4 campaign.

Like most every other bowl-bound team in the country, Auburn and Missouri have another opponent this season — the energy crisis.

Auburn, which will have to travel 1,300 miles to play in El Paso, had to leave its band behind because the airline which had agreed to charter the 260 members cancelled out.

"A lot of our fans are just going to have to stay home," said an Auburn spokesman. "You just can't get across Texas without gasoline and all other flights are booked solid."

Missouri, which doesn't have as far to go as Auburn, is also going to be missing some hometown support. The Tigers' Alumni Association will have only a small crowd on hand. Missouri's band will make the trip, thanks to a $30,000 donation from the Sun Carnival Association to pay for chartered buses.

Promoters were predicting a crowd of between 25,000 and 30,000 for the game. Capacity is 30,000 with each team receiving a guaranteed $100,000.

Both of Auburn's losses in the final two games of the regular season came when Auburn's offensive unit was riddled with injuries. It was a different story when the Tigers were a healthy team.

Auburn's most impressive win of the season was a 7-0 shutout of Houston, the only blemish on the Cougars' 10-1 record and the first shutout against them since 1965.

"We had a different backfield just about every week," said Auburn coach Ralph Jordan of his offensive unit which ranked last in the SEC in total offense.

Freshman tailback Sedrick McIntyre played in only three games and one quarter because of injuries, yet ended up as the team's leading rusher with 315 yards on 64 carries.

But while the offense may have sputtered, the Auburn defense rarely gave ground. The Tigers shut out two opponents, held three others to a touchdown and they were dominated only by Alabama.

Quarterback Wade Whatley, who had to sit out a month with a separated shoulder, is again running at full speed and will be joined by McIntyre, fullback Rusty Fuller and wingback Ed Butler in the backfield.

Jordan, now in his 23rd year at Auburn, has led the Tigers to 13 bowl games, including a 34-10 win over Arizona in the 1968 Sun Bowl.

After being in contention for the Big Eight title most of the year, Missouri finished fifth with a 3-4 record and 7-4 season.

"We had some execution problems which contributed to our losses," said coach Al Onofrio. "And we played some pretty tough teams in Oklahoma and Kansas."

The lack of offensive punch in the Tigers' losses to Oklahoma, 31-3, and Iowa State, 17-7, prompted Onofrio to change quarterbacks. Junior Ray Smith started the final game against Kansas and is expected to get the nod over veteran John Cherry in the Sun Bowl.

Senior tailback Tommy Reason, the team's leading rusher with 610 yards and scorer with four touchdowns, fullback Ray Bybe and slotback Bill Zeigler will join Smith in the Missouri backfield.

Ellender Coach Of Year

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bennie Ellender of Tulane thinks the most important part of his job as a coach is teaching, and he did it so good this season that Tuesday he was named college football coach of the year by UPI.

Ellender was honored for guiding the Green Wave to a 9-2 record, their best in 25 years, the No. 15 spot in the final UPI ratings, and a berth in the Bluebonnet Bowl against Houston.

"I consider our primary responsibility as coaches is teaching, and I think that's exactly what we're doing," said Ellender, who in just three seasons has done much to wipe out 20 years of misery at Tulane.

Tulane's season was "made" when it scored a stunning 14-0 upset of arch foe Louisiana State in the season's final game, the first time Tulane had won that game since 1948, when it finished 9-1.

Other coaches in contention for the honor included a pair who, like Ellender, turned hideous losers into winning teams — Jerry Claiborne of Maryland and Johnny Majors of Pitt — and Barry Switzer of second-randed, undefeated Oklahoma.

Maryland was 8-3, its first winning season since 1961; Pitt, 6-4-1, had its first winner since '63; and Oklahoma won the Big Eight title and finished 10-0-1 even though the incentive of a bowl trip wasn't there since the Sooners are on probation. Both the Terps and the Panthers are playing in their first bowl games since the mid-50's.

'Expectation' Deadline Moved

Grand Island — Horse owners wishing to place their two-year-olds' name along side of Joust Abit Windy, Solid Pepper, and Queen's Turn as winners of the Fonner Park Expectation Stakes will have to take their first step to do so earlier this coming year.

Nominations for the fourth running of the two-year-old stake will close on Jan. 7. Last year nominations for the stake closed nearly two months later on Feb. 27.

The third running of the Expectation, won by Queen's Turn, received a record 47 nominations. The added value of the four-furlong stake has been increased from $5,000 to $6,000, giving rise to the thought that the record nomination figure will be broken again this year.

The estimated gross value of the two-year-old stake has been placed at $13,000. The Expectation Stake will be run in Grand Island on April 26.

Stocks Sharply Higher

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock market prices were sharply higher Tuesday, boosted by an afternoon rally, but brokers said they saw no reason for the sudden advance.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials wavered uncertainly with about a 3-point gain all morning, then stood, and finally bolted 18.37 to 829.49 for the day. Advancing issues broadly led declines 972 to 526 among the 1,827 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange. Total trading volume was 19.49 million shares on the Big Board.

The NYSE broad-based composite advanced .98 to 50.29, while the Amex market value index, recovering from morning losses, closed up .09 at 86.17 Tuesday. A total of 404 issues gained and 396 declined in active trading on the American Stock Exchange.

"You can hunt around for specifics, but nothing happened," said Monte Gordon of Dreyfus Corp. "The market was going along quietly all morning, doing nothing, then it started up with no news."

Brokers said many investors were still waiting to see what would happen to the already once-delayed Mideast peace conference, now scheduled to convene on Friday in Geneva. Investors also were watching the domestic situation closely, brokers said.

Many of the blue-chip and glamour issues were among the market's biggest gainers Tuesday. IBM rose 9½ to 249½, Xerox gained 7½ to 126⅛, Proctor & Gamble added 3⅜ to 92⅞, Polaroid was up 3¼ to 74, Eastman Kodak gained 2¼ to 113¼ and du Pont advanced 2¼ to 151¾.

Weyerhaeuser was the Big Board's most-active stock, up ¼ at 38¾, followed by Houdaille Industries, unchanged at 9⅛, and North American Philips, unchanged at 17. AT&T climbed 1¼ to 49¾ after the company had announced sharply higher earnings for the three months to Nov. 30. UAL, Inc., rose ⅜ to 20.

Airport Terminal Is 61% Finished

. . . Authority Board Told

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

Airport Authority Board members were told Tuesday that the new terminal building now under construction is 61% completed.

Davis, Clark & Associates, the authority's architects, reported that the general contract held by Cook Construction Co. was 61% completed as of Dec. 1. The architects said that erection of structural steel was 99% completed.

Natkin & Co., which is doing the mechanical work, has completed 68% of its project, while Commonwealth Electric has completed 54% of the electrical work.

Delay Granted

In September, the board granted Cook a 150-day delay to complete the terminal to make up for time lost during bad weather last winter.

Scheduled completion date of the multi-million dollar facility is set for September, 1974.

'Lot of Problems'

Chapin noted that the guard "is a source of a lot of our problems. They're the ones that cause the noise, whose equipment breaks down when we need it for snow removal and whose planes tear up our runways. And they (the guard pilots) won't obey orders from the tower," he said.

Board members also were told Tuesday that fuel allocation cuts, while causing some flight changes, have not resulted in any decrease in United Air Lines service during the week.

Jack Radican, manager of United in Lincoln, noted that the number of flights in and out of Lincoln remain at five departures and five arrivals daily, except for the weekends.

As Many Seats

Since United will be using 727s and one 737, he said the same number of seats will be available — 507.

The new schedules will go into effect either Jan. 3 or Jan. 6, he said, depending upon when daylight saving time (DST) goes into effect.

If United receives another fuel slash, however, Radican said additional cutbacks on weekend operations will have to be made.

Frontier Airlines already has reduced service to Lincoln. Overall Frontier has been forced to discontinue 18 flights to eight Nebraska cities.

Follow Suit

The board also went on record recommending that if DST is adopted nationwide, that Nebraska follow suit.

Although noting his opposition to DST as an energy conservation measure, legal counsel Chauncey Barney said if the rest of the nation converted and Nebraska did not, "we'd really be in a mess with our schedules."

United also reported an 8% increase in the number of passengers carried during November, compared to one year ago. Frontier reported a 1% increase in passengers for the same period.

Indian Program Held For Indians

David DeCoteau, 13, and Winston Stabler, 9, sample wojape, a type of fried bread, and wa, shinshaglen, a dessert similar to jelly or jam. David is Sisseston Wahpeton Sioux and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lavory DeCoteau of Lincoln; Winston is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stabler of Lincoln (pictured in the background), members of the Omaha tribe. A day-long program Tuesday at Park School gave Lincoln Indians a chance to view Indian arts, taste native foods and become aware of what the Indian Education Program is trying to accomplish in local schools. According to the latest unofficial census, there are 357 Indian children in Lincoln and 252 of those attend public schools. (Star Photo.)

Nebraska Coalition For Life Opposes Abortion Advocates

By BOB RUMMEL
Associated Press Writer

"My first nine months were spent in my mother's womb — and I made it."

The words are Joe Grier's, but the philosophy behind them is shared by approximately 6,000 Nebraksans who are members of various groups fighting for the right of the unborn to be born.

Grier, a father of five and an employe of Mutual of Omaha, is a member of the Nebraska Coalition for Life, which serves as an umbrella organization for other groups in Nebraska which are opposed to abortion.

Grier says they all share the same goal: To protect the rights of unborn humans, and to provide information to the public which will ensure passage of an amendment to the U.S. Constitution to guarantee those rights.

Mrs. Pat Shald of Gordon, 28, a mother of one and state president of the coalition, explains that some 20 chapters in the state are associated with a national effort to secure passage of such an amendment.

The state group turned its efforts toward the national level following state legislative approval this year of LB286 which, according to Grier, restricted abortions as much as it could while still managing to be in line with the Supreme Court decision which had the effect of liberalizing abortions.

The state law requires the reporting of abortions, but the State Health Department reports the trend — 851 abortions have been reported through October — cannot be analyzed because this is the first year such figures have been recorded.

Section 1 of the Hogan bill reads: "Neither the United States nor any state shall deprive any human being, from the moment of conception, within its jurisdiction, the equal protection of the laws."

A portion of Buckley's says, "With respect to the right to life, the word 'person,' as used in this in this article and the 5th and 15th articles of amendments to the U.S. Constitution, applies to all human beings, including their unborn offspring at every stage of biological development, irrespective of age, health, function or condition of dependency."

Grier says Reps. Dave Martin and John McCollister and Sen. Carl Curtis are supporting the right to life effort, and he believes the state's other congressmen are in accord with their feelings.

Why an amendment?

The whole thing begs a terrific question," Grier explains. "The pro-abortion people have a dilemma — they are killing members of their own species. They can argue all day long whether it is legal or illegal, but we are still killing human beings."

The non-sectarian Right to Life Coalition in turn faces a dilemma, Grier says. Since the coalition does not have a policy on the use of contraceptives, it must offer some alternative to abortions.

The approach now is straightforward. "We tell them they are killing a human being," he says. One alternative, however is to stress the availability of services and agencies which will help the mother through her pregnancy and then accept the child for adoption, he says.

The coalition also emphasizes chastity as a means of prevention, but Grier admits this approach hasn't had much success because 80 per cent of the women seeking abortions are unmarried.

"We all have a partial grasp of the truth," he says. "The abortion people are trying to solve one of our social problems. I find that the pro-lifers and the abortion people are trying to solve the same problem, but our approaches are remarkably different."

Both Grier and Mrs. Shald admit that even if Congress approves a right to life amendment, much work will be needed to gain approval of state legislatures.

Much of this work will be educational. Grier says, "We must let people know how beautifully formed, and the degree of perfection present in an unborn child from the early weeks of pregnancy. People must become aware that an unborn child is a unique being — it has its own blood system, its own sex, and from early stages, its own fingerprints."

Basically, he says, it all comes back to one question: "We made it; why should't they?"

Arts, Sciences Faculty Opposes Wayne State Administration Plan

The faculty of the Wayne State College school of arts and sciences has voted 44 to 1 to go on record opposing the college administration's policy resulting from decisions about faculty retrenchment made this month.

According to a college spokesman, "retrenchment" refers to dismissing faculty members based on financial requirements rather than judgments of the faculty members' abilities.

According to the minutes of a meeting of the arts and sciences faculty Dec. 13, the vote of no confidence resulted because, the final motion said, the "faculty cannot agree with the two criteria used by the administration to determine retrenchment."

Criteria Listed

Those criteria are "the priority of student credit hour production" and "the assumption that all subject areas in the college curriculum are of equal academic value and importance in higher education."

The motion, made by Sayre Anderson, said that by Wayne State using those criteria, "the administration is expressing a philosophy of education which is in direct contradiction of the general objectives of the college" as stated in the general catalog for 1973, and "the academic master plan for the State College System of Nebraska."

The motion concluded: "Through the severe cuts imposed upon the arts and sciences at Wayne State College in the last two years, the administration has made it increasingly more impossible for the college to meet these goals.

"By failing to maintain — let alone increase — staffing in the arts and sciences which will provide a strong academic core for each student's curriculum, the administration has not, we feel, acted in the best interests of higher education."

Motion Passed

Arts and Sciences Dean Dr. Irv Brandt confirmed Tuesday by telephone that the faculty meeting with 49 members present took place and that the motion was passed. But he would make no further comment, saying college President Dr. Lyle Seymour would make a statement.

Dr. Seymour was in Lincoln on business, and was unable to be contacted either in Lincoln or in Wayne later.

The minutes of the meeting state that the arts and sciences faculty motion "represents the feelings of over half of the ranked faculty of Wayne State College."

The motion included provisions for sending copies of it to Seymour, other Wayne State administrators and faculty, the Board of Trustees of the State Colleges and its executive officer, the governor and the chairman of the Nebraska Legislature's appropriations committee.

President Signs Free-Mailing Privileges Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon has signed legislation reforming congressional free-mailing privileges, the White House said Tuesday.

The measure prohibits a member of Congress from using his franking privilege for free mass mailings within 28 days of an election in which he is a candidate.

The bill also permanently authorizes widows of former presidents to send nonpolitical mail free and allows congressmen who leave office to retain the franking privilege until April 1 following the end of their term.

Mattel Plans To Sell Circus

HAWTHORNE, Calif. (AP) — Mattel, Inc., said Tuesday it had agreed to sell Ringling Bros.—Barnum & Bailey circus to an unidentified buyer.

Terms were not disclosed.

Iowa Attorney Gets Sentence On Tax Charge

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa (AP) — A federal judge issued a suspended one-year prison sentence Tuesday to former Rep. James E. Bromwell and fined him $10,000 for failure to file income taxes.

Bromwell, 53, a Cedar Rapids attorney and a former Republican congressman, pleaded guilty Nov. 7 to failure to file a 1969 federal income tax return.

Bromwell was elected to Congress in 1960, and served two terms before he was defeated by Democrat John Culver in 1964.

Bromwell was indicted by a federal grand jury in Des Moines on Aug. 22, when he was charged with failure to file returns for 1968 through 1970 on a gross income totaling $182,242.

Second Inmate Of Jail Takes A Razor Blade

For the second time in three days an inmate of the city jail is being held for observation at Lincoln General Hospital after swallowing pieces of razor blade.

Dragutin Muller, 33, of British Columbia, was taken to the hospital after he told the police nurse he had swallowed an entire razor blade. X-rays showed three or four pieces of razor blade in his stomach.

Penal Complex Inmate Given Up To 6 Years

A Penal Complex inmate was sentenced Tuesday to up to an additional six years in the complex in connection with an escape last August and an assault with intent to rape charge.

Lancaster District Judge Herbert Ronin sentenced Narcisse Merrick Jr., to one year on the escape charge and from three to five years on the assault charge and ordered the terms to run consecutively to each other and to the term he is serving.

Merrick, who had pleaded no contest to the charges, was among a group of 15 inmates released Aug. 11 to attend the Indian Pow-Wow held at Swayer-Snell Park.

According to police at the time of the incident, a 61-year-old woman was allegedly attacked while sleeping in her bedroom and suffered knife cuts and other injuries.

Ship's Crew Contains Fire

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif. (AP) — A Norwegian cargo ship radioed Tuesday that it was afire about 950 miles northeast of Honolulu in the Pacific. The 32-man crew contained the blaze, the Coast Guard said.

A Coast Guard spokesman said the captain of the 609-foot vessel radioed: "Fire under control. All ships please procede your voyages."

In an earlier message the captain reported heavy fire and smoke and said the crew would abandon ship. Later, he decided to fight the fire instead, a Coast Guard spokesman said.

Three Navy ships and a commercial vessel steaming to aid the Wilmara were told to turn back. An Air Force plane was sent to the scene to make sure everything was okay, the Coast Guard said.

Dita Beard Won't Be Called

©The New York Times

New York — The Watergate special prosecutor has decided not to call Dita D. Beard as a witness before the Watergate grand jury, following two psychiatric examinations of the former lobbyist for the International Telephone and Telegraph Corp.

Mrs. Beard had been considered a potentially important witness in establishing ITT's controversial relationship with the Nixon administration.

However, a psychiatrist appointed by the court at the request of Leon Jaworski, the special prosecutor, has examined Mrs. Beard, and has concluded that she would not testify, sources close to the investigation said. Details of the two psychiatric reports were not disclosed.

The psychiatric examinations became known Tuesday when Chief Judge John J. Sirica of the U.S. District Court in Washington unsealed a "stipulation and order" that was filed by the special prosecutor's office last month.

The document stated that psychiatric reports on Mrs. Beard had been prepared by doctors selected by both Mrs. Beard and the government.

After the examinations, the document said, a subpoena requiring Mrs. Beard to appear before the Watergate Grand Jury was withdrawn.

Instead, she was interviewed by representatives of the special prosecutor's office. Although the court document said the psychiatric reports must remain sealed, sources said the findings of the Watergate psychiatrist generally supported the contention of Mrs. Beard's psychiatrist that she would not be a valuable witness.

The special prosecutor's office declined to comment on the psychiatric report. Mrs. Beard's attorney did not respond to an inquiry.

Mrs. Beard's testimony was considered important in the government's investigation into a controversial antitrust settlement that allowed ITT to retain the Hartford Fire Insurance Co., which is generally considered to be its most valuable subsidiary.

Government scrutiny of the settlement was provoked last year when a memorandum, allegedly written by Mrs. Beard, became available. The memorandum said that a pledge of up to $400,000 toward the Republican National Convention "has gone a long way toward our negotiations on the mergers eventually coming out as Hal (ITT's chairman Harold S. Geneen) wants them."

The special prosecutor's office is investigating alleged influence from the White House in settling ITT's antitrust cases. Mrs. Beard will still be required to provide the Watergate Grand Jury with documents requested by the special prosecutor, reportedly relating to the settlement and to her memorandum, according to the court document that was unsealed.

Until this point, it had been Mrs. Beard's physical health rather than her mental condition that had come under scrutiny.

Nixon 'Can't Remember' If He Paid Taxes

Washington (UPI) — An official spokesman said Tuesday that President Nixon "can't remember" if he paid any state income taxes when he served as vice president and a member of Congress from California.

Kenneth Clawson also said that White House officials had no intention of trying to search records to determine whether Nixon paid California income taxes during the period when he was a House member, a senator and two-term vice president under Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Nixon disclosed Dec. 8 in a detailed personal financial report that he paid no state income taxes in California or the District of Columbia since becoming president in 1969.

Clawson, deputy director of White House communications, said he had asked Nixon about his congressional and vice presidential years and the President told him "he can't remember" whether he paid state income taxes during that time.

Gerald L. Warren, deputy presidential press secretary, said he was advised that "we're not going to be able to provide that information."

Both Clawson and Warren indicated that the White House felt it would be too difficult to locate records pertaining to Nixon's tax status in California between 1948 and 1962.

Nixon has voted in California since he became president and certified on his 1969 federal tax return that his property in San Clemente was his "principal residence."

When Nixon's financial report was issued, White House officials said the District of Columbia does not impose an income tax on any elected federal official who resides in the city and that California tax officials had ruled that Nixon, as president, owed no tax to their state because he did not live there most of the time.

The California Franchise Tax Board, which administers the state income tax system, said subsequently that it made no ruling on Nixon's tax status since he assumed the presidency.

'Casual Attitude' Criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) — Criticizing what it called "a casual attitude" in authorizing work at President Nixon's two residences, the General Accounting Office urged Congress Tuesday to require closer control over such federal spending in the future.

The congressional watchdog agency, in a 99-page report on government projects at Nixon's homes in Key Biscayne, Fla., and San Clemente, Calif., also recommended that a limit be placed on the number of private presidential residences given permanent protective facilities.

The report said $1.4 million was spent at Nixon's two homes, almost all of it requested by the Secret Service for protective purposes.

The agency said present procedures fostered "a casual attitude" in authorizing the work at the two residences. It said they also invited the General Services Administration to do more than required, whereas Secret Service requests were vague and general.

It recommended that Congress enact legislation requiring the Secret Service to make an annual public report showing in detail the spending for security at presidential residences, and said funds for the work should come from money appropriated only for that purpose.

Senate Watergate Panel Plans To Subpoena Scores Of Tapes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Watergate Committee voted Tuesday to subpoena scores of previously unsought presidential tape recordings and documents from the White House.

Chairman Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., said the new material involves the Watergate break-in and bugging, the alleged sabotage of Democratic presidential campaigns and illegal campaign financing.

The committee acted within 15 hours of the time a bill giving the U.S. District Court here jurisdiction over such subpoenas became law at midnight Monday.

President Nixon said Monday night he had decided not to veto the measure because he thought such an action would be misinterpreted. He said he was letting it become law without his signature.

As companions to the new law, the Senate on Tuesday passed a bill and a resolution setting up for the first time formal procedures to deal with presidential claims of executive privilege on refusing to produce witnesses and material for Congress.

The federal courts would have jurisdiction to rule on the validity of subpoenas by the House and Senate and by all congressional committees.

Ervin said the long delay in obtaining the material the committee seeks has postponed by many weeks the conclusion of the committee's investigation.

"It has been responsible for some of the prolongation of the Watergate controversy in the public mind," he said.

Ervin said new hearings will open after Congress returns next month. No date has been set.

Ervin was asked by reporters to comment on the President's criticism that the new law is bad legislation that will weaken the federal judiciary.

He disagreed and said: "It's bad for Congress to have to pass a law to compel the President to do something which the Constitution already requires him to do when it states that the president shall faithfully execute the laws."

Ervin sponsored the two new measures.

Reports on them make clear they are the response of Congress to broadened definitions of executive privilege made over the last two years.

In praising passage of the two measures, Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, noted testimony in which former Atty. Gen. Richard Kleindienst asserted the president had virtually absolute power to withold information from Congress.

The new legislation is designed to provide an orderly settlement of executive privilege conflicts by the courts when the approval of at least one house of Congress has been obtained, Muskie said.

Stolen Safe Found In Car; Duo Arrested

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa (AP)—A safe stolen in Atlantic, Iowa, was found Tuesday in the trunk of a car occupied by two Michigan teen-agers, police said.

Paul D. Charboneau, 19, and a 16-year-old youth, both of River Rouge, Mich., were in custody after being booked on suspicion of breaking and entering a Council Bluffs service station.

Police said a routine check of the car revealed a small, unopened safe taken sometime after 11 p.m. Monday from Spurgeon's dry goods store in Atlantic. The safe contained an undisclosed amount of cash, investigators said.

is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you. 12-19
